

The Black Cat

A Wife for the Pastor

MAY

1905

A Wife for the Pastor.

$150 Prize.

Chapin Howard.

The Engineer and the Pilot.

Nathaniel Dickinson.

Love's Immune.

Alice E. Brooks.

The Closed Door.

Evelyn Sneed Barnett.

The Man Who Went Back.

Viridian Greens.

Vol. X., No. 2. Whole No. 116. Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Co.

Price

5 Cents

THE SHORTSTORY PUBLISHING CO., 144 HIGH ST., BOSTON, MASS.
and 10 Norfolk Street, Strand, London, W. C.

B

This Sorosis Shoe is one of the most popular and satisfactory.

It is made in Patent, Tan, Kid and Glazed Calf

Women enjoy themselves most when they know that in every particular they are stylishly dressed. Of feminine attire there is nothing more truly creditable than appropriately beautiful shoes and stockings. The Sorosis Shoe manufacturers supply both of these requisites in the greatest and most attractive varieties.

The Sorosis shoe manufacturers' wonderful success is greatly due to the fact: they make all their own lasts and patterns.

No other shoe-makers in the world take this trouble to supply truly original designs and perfect fit.

Sorosis Shoes for Women, for Men, for Boys, for Girls, and for Infants have style and durability; and they are to be depended upon to keep the feet that wear them very shapely and also entirely comfortable.

A. E. LITTLE & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS,

LYNN, MASS.

FOR EVERYBODY AT HOME HAND SAPOLIO

The Baby, because it is so soft and dainty for its delicate skin.

The School Boy
because its use ensures him

"perfect" marks in neatness.

The "Big Sister" because it keeps her complexion and hands soft and pretty.

The busy Mother, because it keeps her hands young and pretty in spite of housework and sewing.

The Father, because it helps him to leave behind the grime of daily work.

Even

because it keeps the pores open, removes all stains, softens the skin, and aids its natural changes.

THE SAFEST SOAP IN EXISTENCE IS HAND SAPOLIO
SHOULD BE ON EVERY WASHSTAND

TO DEMONSTRATE the character of our instruction and give some idea of the immediate and practical benefits to be gained from our courses, we will send FREE one of our regular lesson papers (64 pages, size containing a full outline of the first principles of telephone work whom you know to be interested in any of the courses mentioned below, (state course in which interested) and three two-cent stamps to pay postage. Address Room 10.

For the Names of Three Friends

Among the subjects covered are: Transformation of Sound into Electrical Energy; Batteries; Principles, Construction and Operation of Telephone Instruments, Transmitter, Receiver, Induction Coil, Generator, Ringing; Diagram of Connections; Bridging and Series Telephones; Desk Telephones, etc.

500-page Bulletin giving synopsis of courses in Electrical, Mechanical, Steam, Civil and Sanitary Engineering, Textile Manufacture, Architecture, Bookbinding, Mechanical Drawing, etc., sent free on request.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CORRESPONDENCE
Chicago, Ill.

Mention The Black Cat

PRACTICAL DRAWING
Taught by Correspondence
Instruction in Commercial Drawing, Illustrative Drawing, Lettering and Design, General Drawing, Architectural and Mechanical Perspectives, Newspaper Drawing, etc. Instruction endorsed by leading authorities. Successful students PRACTICAL DRAWING taught by PRACTICAL methods. Write for further information.
School of Applied Art (Box 2400), Battle Creek, Mich.

Authors Agency.

Send stamp for New Booklet to

W. M. A. DRESSER,
R. 10, 400 Broadway,
Cambridge, Mass.

Mention The Black Cat.

LEARN In the time you now waste you can secure admittance to the bar in your own state and be a success. We make the way so straight and easy it is little short of marvelous. To learn how costs nothing. Isn't it worth your while to ask for free book?
LAW
Sprague Correspondence School of Law, 404 Lafayette Bldg., Detroit, Mich.
AT HOME

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS
WE GUARANTEE to teach our course in shorthand complete in 30 days study of 4 hours each. No ruled lines; no position; no shading, dots, no dashes. No long list of word signs to confuse. Easy, simple, speedy, practical. Students in high-grade positions. Employers pleased. Lawyers, doctors, literary folk, club women, can now acquire shorthand with ease for use in their callings. No need to spend months, as with old systems. "Boyd's Syllabic System," 20th century wonder, is the best. Write to-day for testimonials, booklets, etc.
CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
(Incorporated) 1208 MADISON AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

IF YOU ARE A WRITER
We can help you to find a market for anything you write.
MSS. SUCCESSFULLY PLACED.
Criticaled, Revised, Typewritten.
References: Edwin Markham, Margaret E. Sangster, and others. Established 1890. Send for leaflet E.
UNITED LITERARY PRESS 197 5th Ave. NEW YORK.

MUSIC LESSONS AT YOUR HOME

only and guarantee success. Money refunded if not perfectly satisfied. Hundreds write: "With I had known of your school before." For booklet, testimonials and full information, address T. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 53 C, 10 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

25.00

If You Earn Less

I can pay you your salary or income by teaching you how to write catchy, intelligent advertising.

My System of Instruction by Mail is the only one in existence that has the hearty endorsement of the great experts and publishers, and I am anxious to read my prospectus, together with the most remarkable facsimile proof ever given in the history of correspondence instruction, if you are interested. I will show you how to earn from $50 to $100 per week.
Geo. H. Powell, 1506 Temple Court, S. F.

Per Week

UNDER OUR EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT
We qualify you to hold a responsible position paying at least $20 A WEEK in any of the following professions:
Illustrating, Book-keeping, Electrical Engineering, Advertising, Proofreading, Shorthand Writing, Stenography, Journalism, Teaching, Business Correspondence, English Branches.
Ambitious men and women should make application at once for our EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT and free book "Struggles with the World." Mention profession you wish to follow. WRITE TO-DAY for full particulars.
Correspondence Institute of America,
Box 780, - - Scranton, Pa.

$50 PRIZE STORY

Won By One of our Graduates
You may do as much if you take our course. Practical newspaper men actively engaged in high editorial positions on the Chicago dailies supervise and send weekly criticism of the work of each individual student. Fees moderate. Synopsis of the course, Catalog, "Hints to Journalists" and "Hints to Story Writers," all free.

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF JOURNALISM
115 DEARBORN ST., Suite 103, CHICAGO, ILL.

Manuscripts

Criticaled, Corrected and Placed.
Writers advised by expert literary writers, thoroughly in touch with leading publishers, and familiar with all wants. Sales negotiated. Terms very moderate. Write for booklet describing Department of Manuscripts.

National Correspondence Institute,
26-32 Second National Bank Building,
Washington, D. C.

SHORT STORY
EXPERT

Zangwill Says

Of Sherwin Cody's "How to Write Fiction," reprinted in his Art of Writing and Speaking the English Language (4 vols. in a box, $1). "It is the most sensible treatise on the short story that has yet appeared in England, a book that has not yet realized that story writing is an art, and a rare and difficult art." Mr. Cody's "World's Greatest Short Stories" (1) is the standard text book for story writing in leading universities. Honest, helpful advice at instruction from Mr. Cody himself by mail.
SCHOOL OF ENGLISH, 844 OPEKA HOUSE, CHICAGO

Piano, Organ, Banjo, Guitar, Cornet, Viola or Saxophone, Singing, Harmonica and Composition. Expense small. We teach by mail.

LIFE OF Webster FREE

If you will send three two-cent stamps to cover postage and mailing expenses, we will send you the complete life of Daniel Webster, by Edward Everett. This biography, in 140 pages, with a portrait of Webster, is a complete life story of one of the most commanding figures in American history. It is a beautifully printed, copyrighted volume. We have board up 500 copies of this biography, which we shall send FREE to the first five hundred replies received. This life of Webster is taken just as it stands from the a superb new library of biography. This splendid twenty-volume work contains forty-one life stories of great Americans, making a connected history of the United States, from the discovery of Columbus, through the nineteenth century. It is history told in narrative form by the lives of the men who made it.

Makers of American History

For an hour's pleasant reading or for serious study, this work is admirably adapted. It gives complete biographies of Lincoln, Lee, Jefferson, Washington, Robert Fulton, Webster, Clay, and other great characters in our country's history.

We will let you know when we send the booklet how you can get the entire set of twenty volumes at a low price, and on the easy payment plan. Send us your name and address, written plainly, with three two-cent stamps for postage and mailing expenses. Mention THE BLACK CAT when writing. Better write to-day. Five hundred copies won't last long.

J. A. HILL & COMPANY

44-60 East 23d Street, NEW YORK

JOURNALISM

Practical, paying newspaper work, writing short stories, etc.,

TAUGHT BY MAIL

Instruction in personal charge of Mr. Henry Litchfield West, formerly managing editor of Washington Post. Successful students everywhere. Position secured for students. Write for illustrated booklet.

NATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE
36-46 Second National Bank Bldg.
Washington, D. C.

STORIES SOLD MSS. REVISED

Story-Writing and Journalism taught by mail; MSS. criticized and revised; also, sold and syndicated on commission. Send for free booklet, "Writing for Profit"; it tells how.—THE NATIONAL PRESS ASSOC'N, 68 The Baldwin, Indianapolis, Ind.

Have You LITERARY TALENT

If so, you owe it to yourself to develop it. Nearly every magazine in the country is calling for original material. We can make you a Journalist by mail. Write at once for free particulars.

Springer Correspondence School of Journalism, 222 Majestic Building, Detroit Mich.

AUTHORS
READ
PAGE XI

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS

Hit the Bull's-Eye of Success

by
Edward T. Page

Aim at the advertising target — devote your time and energy to the business that will bring you the highest rewards. You will find that even the beginner in the advertising business is better paid than the man who has reached the top in almost every other line.

Where you succeed as clerk, stenographer, salesman, etc., to the extent of earning a salary of $15 a week, you should be able to earn $25 a week as an advertising man; if you are earning $25 a week in your present position, as an advertisement writer you would be worth $40 a week; and so on up the scale.

We can cite you to hundreds of instances — recorded on our employed students' lists — of men who have been able to double and treble their incomes, and in many cases become a partner in the business because of their knowledge of advertising gained in our school. It does not require a moment more time or a whit more energy to earn $5,000 a year than to earn $10 a week. It's all a matter of special training.

Ask Mr. W. H. Barnes, of Los Angeles, California, if he really works as hard, now that he is advertising manager, as he did formerly when driving a laundry wagon. Mr. A. A. Brentano, of Evansville, Ind., will tell you that he finds it far more pleasant and remunerative to be advertising manager of a newspaper than to work in a stove factory. Write to Mr. W. A. McCall, of St. Louis, Mo., and see if he doesn't assure you that his work is really less arduous as advertising manager for the Laclede Gas Company, than when employed as a newspaper solicitor. You will hear the same story everywhere from Page-Davis men — a story of interesting work, short hours and good pay, as against a former condition of monotonous routine, long hours, and comparatively small pay. 'You have their word for it, and you have ours.' Can you ask for greater evidence?

When you enroll with us you enter our practical training school of experience and do the actual work of an advertisement writer, under the closest scrutiny of successful advertising men. You are helped to write advertisements for your firm, to work up an advertising business in your own home, or to secure a position at not less than $25 a week, if you desire it.

We will send you, free, upon request, full details regarding the opportunities for getting into immediate employment, and the latest list of employed graduates earning up to $100 a week, as a result of this very training we now offer you. Address your letter to:

PAGE-DAVIS COMPANY

Address { Dept. 525, 90 Wabash Ave., Chicago, or either { Dept. 525, 150 Nassau St., New York office

SAVE

for your Own and your Family's Future.

You may be surprised to know how profitably you can invest even an average of $2.00 per week in Endowment Life Insurance in

The Prudential

Without committing myself to any action, I shall be glad to receive free particulars and rates of Endowment Policies

Cash amount payable to you (if living) in 10, 15, or 20 years with Dividends (according to plan selected).

If the Insured dies before the end of the Endowment Period, the full amount of the policy is paid to the beneficiary.

Amount

Name

Address

Occupation

To The Prudential Insurance Co.
of America

We desire to correspond with you on the subject and furnish full information as to Rates, Benefits and Privileges.

JOHN P. DRYDEN,
President. Dept. 93.

Home Office:
NEWARK, N. J.

SEND COUPON TO-DAY.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

Vol. X., No. 2,
Whole No., 116.

MAY, 1905.

5 cents a copy.
50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for stories that are stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk.

CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

A Wife for the Pastor.*

BY CHAPIN HOWARD.

WHEN the Rev. Gilbert Bancroft began his pastorate in Windham, it was felt by the members of the village church that they had secured all—in fact a great deal more—than they had any reason to expect. They had treated themselves to the pleasurable excitement of listening to a long line of candidates, considering and rejecting, until one Sunday morning a slim young preacher had arisen in the pulpit and surveyed them earnestly with a pair of very fine gray eyes.

His frock coat fitted perfectly, his collar and tie were irreproachable, and as it had been previously ascertained that he was hampered by neither a family nor a cough, an instantaneous conviction swept through the feminine half of the audience that here, at last, was the man for whom they had been waiting. In a few isolated cases of spinsterhood this conviction even assumed a more personal significance.

The more conservative, masculine part of the congregation waited for the sermon before committing itself to a decision—happily unconscious that it was taking an entirely unnecessary

* Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* Copyright secured in Great Britain.

* The writer of this story received a cash prize of $150 in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending October 12, 1904.

precaution, and that the candidate had been engaged practically from the first moment. Before the singing of the second hymn, Mrs. Saxton, the wife of one of the deacons, was already congratulating herself on the fact that her daughter, Milly, sitting unsuspectingly at her side, had always been carefully reared, and was fitted in every way to take up the duties of a minister's wife. The parsonage roof, of course, would have to be repaired, and she would insist upon the Ladies' Society re-papering the parlor; otherwise, the house would do very well as it was.

At the close of service, by skilful manœuvering and from the vantage of a front pew, the Deacon's wife secured a promise from the candidate to take tea with her during the first week of his pastorate, and her invitation was only the first in a royal salute of welcome which rained upon him from all the tea-tables in the village, as soon as it was definitely known that he would accept the call extended to him by the church.

The parsonage was a low-roofed, pleasant-looking white house, standing well back from the street, on a gentle rise of lawn, and protected from the too close scrutiny of its neighbors by a baffling hedge of locust trees and shrubbery. Here, in the library, on the south side of the house, young Mr. Bancroft established himself with his typewriter and his books, scattering through the other rooms his scanty supply of furniture, the somewhat battered equipment of his seminary days. He engaged, as housekeeper, Mrs. Emily Kimbal, an elderly widow of his congregation, and she at once assumed a motherly charge of the minister and his affairs.

She was inclined to view rather skeptically the frank outburst of cordiality with which the ladies of the congregation sought to make their new pastor feel at home. He, however, accepted all his invitations courteously, starting out every afternoon punctually at half-past five, faultlessly attired in clothes of a noticeably city cut, his fine, abstracted gaze unconscious of the admiring scrutiny of half the village. Mrs. Kimbal never failed to observe him critically from the shelter of the parlor blinds.

"My land!" she remarked scornfully to herself, "Anyone would think they was tryin' ter pay for the spiritual food they get on Sunday by feedin' him up on cake an' preserves all through the week. An' when they can't ask him out, they're a-sendin' of things in. There's enough jell an' spice-cake in the pantry now to keep him for a year. First they know they'll ruin his digestion an' then they'll have him preachin' Hell-fire an' damnation at 'em fit to kill !"

It was true that everything feminine ingenuity could devise had been showered upon the young clergyman to relieve the supposed barrenness of his existence. And from endless culinary delicacies he found himself the possessor of a bewildering array of Bible-markers, embroidered slippers, and sofa-cushions, all of which he gave over into his housekeeper's charge with a rather helpless air. He regarded them simply as well-meant expressions of friendliness and good-will on the part of certain members of his flock, and he steadily declined to attach to them any of the hidden significance which Mrs. Kimbal's scornful eye detected in each new gift.

The church in Windham was only his second pastorate, and he was young, and very much in earnest. He had been persuaded to accept the call principally because he believed that here he had found a definite work waiting to be done. From the first Sunday that he had preached in the village, he had set his heart upon securing the erection of a new church to replace the present old, dilapidated structure. The scheme appealed to him strongly as offering an unlimited outlet for his energies, and as soon as he was settled, he set about the work enthusiastically.

Apparently his plan met with ready sympathy and encouragement on every side. The more influential men of his congregation, whom he approached first, listened to him attentively, and urged him to call and talk the matter over more thoroughly. Meanwhile, all the services of the church were well attended, and the outlook for success appeared most gratifyingly bright.

But subtly and by degrees a conviction seemed to have insinuated itself among his congregation that one of the very qualifications which had at first recommended him to their favor was, perhaps, after all, proving somewhat of a drawback. It began to be quite generally felt, and was even delicately hinted, that a bachelor clergyman's usefulness was necessarily limited. Several kind, motherly ladies, who were possessed of daughters or nieces of a marriageable age, admitted to him (confidentially) that they sighed whenever they thought of the loneliness of his life in that great parsonage. One or two even playfully remonstrated with him — there were so many sweet, sensible girls in his congregation who were in every way fitted to be ministers' wives.

The Rev. Gilbert Bancroft was at first puzzled, then disconcerted, and finally genuinely annoyed at this solicitude shown on his behalf. He found it humiliating to admit that the interest and enthusiasm which he honestly believed he had succeeded in arousing in the building of the new church were, in reality, only the thin cloak to various sentimental schemes for inveigling him into matrimony against his will. His young confidence and belief in his congregation were severely shaken, and he passed through a period of marked depression and discouragement, which Mrs. Kimbal noticed with an experienced eye.

"He's beginnin' to find out what they're a-drivin' at," she mused, "an' he's tryin' not to have any un-Christian thoughts agin' 'em, poor man. Seems as if they was afraid they wasn't a-gettin' their money's worth — hirin' a single man."

At first Mr. Bancroft had thought to put an end to these embarrassing suggestions by announcing firmly that he did not intend to marry. But he was baffled and enraged to observe that this was indulgently regarded merely as the first step in his inevitable surrender. There was no apparent abatement in the futile schemes to ensnare him, and he continued to find himself an unwilling, but outwardly courteous guest, at tea-tables graced by the presence of some demure and blushing village maiden whose virtues and accomplishments were sure to be made the subject of many a covert allusion for his benefit. The hearts of his parishioners were evidently set upon his marrying, and they could give their attention to nothing else. The new church, in the minds of the ladies at least, was a secondary consideration, and could very well afford to wait.

The thought of failing in this, his first ambitious undertaking, was intolerable to him, but after six months of unavailing protest he found himself reduced to a state of unholy exasperation, and realizing that his patience was exhausted, he determined to seek refuge temporarily in flight. And so, having secured an old-time friend of his seminary days to occupy the pulpit during his absence, he arranged with the committee of the church to be away from Windham for three weeks.

The departure occasioned considerable surprise, and a number of theories were advanced to account for it satisfactorily — the most complacent and widely credited being that he had gone away to get the ring. No one felt exactly in a position to supply particulars, but a feeling of pleased expectancy spread through the village. There were so many vacant third fingers upon which that ring might fittingly be placed ! Gossip and speculation increased as the time for his return drew near. A sensation was confidently expected.

And it came.

The unguessed truth burst with the paralyzing suddenness of a bomb among the startled congregation. The Rev. Gilbert Banercroft had been married quietly, and was bringing home his bride !

The news was received with mingled feelings of incredulity and dismay. No one could quite explain how the report had started. It seemed to have originated spontaneously from the very air, and Mrs. Kimbal was appealed to on all sides for confirmation. Scant satisfaction, however, was to be obtained from her. She would neither affirm nor deny.

"Anyway, it's just what you've all been a-hopin' an' a-prayin' for, ain't it ?" she demanded. "I wouldn't be so upset about it, though, if I was you. It don't look just orthodox — bein' so surprised to find your prayer's been answered."

Mrs. Saxton voiced the general opinion of the flock when she replied that if a minister made up his mind to marry "it seemed hardly necessary for him to go outside his own congregation."

"It wasn't necessary," Mrs. Kimbal admitted, "land no ! But why do you 'spose I sent to the city when I got my new alpaca three years ago — 'stead of buyin' it here to the store ? Because they didn't keep the line of goods I was lookin' for. So it ain't surprisin', is it, he should feel the same ?"

A few days later all doubts were set at rest when, just at dusk, an unfamiliar covered carriage, with a large trunk strapped behind, clattered up the village street, and stopped before the parsonage gate. The Rev. Gilbert Banercroft alighted, and then, turning, lifted out a slender, girlish figure, stylishly gowned in black and wearing a heavy veil. The two passed slowly up the walk, beneath the searching gaze of half the village, the lady leaning heavily upon her husband's arm. Mrs. Kimbal met them in the hall, the trunk was brought in, then the door closed, and the carriage drove away.

The village gasped.

The following Sunday all Windham attended morning service. But its curiosity was destined to go unsatisfied. The Rev. Gilbert Bancroft entered the church alone, and made his way composedly into the pulpit. His eager congregation could scarcely wait for the benediction to be pronounced before they crowded about him, congratulating and exclaiming. All the ladies, it appeared, had expected to see the bride at church.

He met all inquiries with his usual reticence. There had always been something in his manner which checked inquisitiveness, and it was felt more strongly than ever now. He thanked them pleasantly. Yes, it had all been very sudden. Still, he had felt sure that his congregation would approve heartily of the idea if they had known. But Mrs. Bancroft was very frail, and would have to be allowed to do good in her own way. He had brought her to Windham only on the condition that she might be sure of the same absolute quiet in which, for the last few years, she had been compelled to live. He hoped she might exert a great influence for good, but would beg the ladies to excuse her from receiving calls.

The flock withdrew, baffled and a little over-awed.

During the next few days, however, in spite of the request, several well-meaning ladies insisted upon "just running in" to see their pastor's wife. But they were met by Mrs. Kimbal and the unchanging announcement that Mrs. Bancroft begged to be excused. No one succeeded in penetrating the impregnable wall of privacy which seemed to hedge her in. Occasionally, just at dusk, she might be seen through openings in the shrubbery, pacing slowly up and down the walk before the house, leaning on her husband's arm. She was always trimly gowned in unvarying black with a white shawl thrown about her shoulders. She was very stately, with abundant brown hair, and in the twilight looked noticeably pale.

These infrequent and distant glimpses of their pastor's wife were all that the congregation were able to obtain. As time went on she took no part in the church work and attended none of the services. Her existence became the mystery of the quiet village life. Young Mr. Bancroft was dexterously plied with questions on all sides but he parried them as skilfully, with that guarded manner now become habitual.

Mrs. Kimbal's invariable reply was pithy—and almost beligerent:

"I can't see as folks has any reason to complain. She married him, didn't she?—not the deacons an' the whole congregation."

One determined effort—and only one—was made to storm the lady's resolute seclusion. Placid Deacon Saxton was chosen for the task. Having been carefully instructed and rehearsed by his wife, he made his way docilly up the grand path to the parsonage one evening when Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft could be seen taking their usual twilight promenade. At sight of the approaching figure the minister turned and led his wife to the far end of the walk. There he left her and returning greeted his visitor with challenging cordiality while the lady remained standing by a lilac bush, her graceful back half turned. Deacon Saxton, very much disconcerted by the unexpected coolness of his reception, stammered out his errand. But before he had half finished he was cut short by an indignant exclamation from Mrs. Kimbal who sped past them from the house. The lady by the lilac-bush lay prostrate on the grass.

Mr. Bancroft sprang to her side, peremptorily waving back the Deacon who, thoroughly appalled at the disastrous consequences of his intrusion, beat a hasty retreat through toward the gate. There, glancing back, he could see the unconscious, black-clad figure being carried tenderly toward the house.

Instead of being solved, the mystery had only deepened. Even the twilight promenades were now abandoned and no glimpse was caught of Mrs. Bancroft during the Fall or Winter. After many fruitless efforts village curiosity was, for once, obliged to admit itself completely baffled and the mystery was reluctantly left to Time, the great unraveller.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Gilbert Bancroft had been steadily at work raising money for the building of the new church. Since he had chosen to settle his own matrimonial future he had been free to pursue his scheme, unhampered by the halo of romance which had before surrounded him. Public interest had shifted temporarily from his own personality to his wife's and the former zeal of his congregation for church work abated somewhat. But he worked on steadily, his earnestness and perseverance carrying him through moments of discouragement and apparent failure until, at the beginning of Spring, he had accomplished the seemingly impossible — the money for the new church had actually been raised.

Then, one Sunday morning, he electrified his congregation by quietly reading his resignation. He felt, he told them, that his work in Windham was successfully completed, thanks to their own generosity. He had decided to accept a call to a larger church in a distant state where the opportunity for work was greater, for he was young, with a young man's ambitions.

In spite of the loyal protests of his congregation, he resolutely declined to reconsider this determination and during the next few weeks began the packing and shipping of his household goods. Although he made no mention of the fact in connection with his going, it was generally believed that Mrs. Bancroft's health formed the real reason for the change.

Would she leave Windham without meeting any of the members of her husband's church? This was the question which the village discussed with growing excitement as the day of departure drew near. But Mr. Bancroft made his hurried round of farewell calls alone and in response to covert hints and open inquiries merely expressed his regret that his congregation could not have had the pleasure of knowing his wife, but he begged them to believe that he would have arranged it if it had been possible. He should always remember his Windham friends most pleasantly.

"An invalid wife is goin' to be a terrible drag on him," Mrs. Saxton prophesied to her daughter, Milly, as they watched the slim, athletic figure striding down their front path to the gate. "But she ain't hindered him from doin' a grand good work here. We couldn't never have got the new church if it hadn't been for him."

The next evening the carriage which was to carry Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft the three miles to the station, drew up before the parsonage, and later the whole village heard it when it drove away. Mrs. Kimbal remained over one more day to close the house, then she locked the front door, hung the key on its familiar nail in the woodshed and was carried off by the stage for a long visit with her brother's family in North Walpole.

The deserted house had a lonely look behind its screen of shrubbery as it stood awaiting the arrival of its next occupant.

Late one afternoon, nearly a week after the departure of the minister and his wife, Milly Saxton burst into the kitchen where her mother was preparing supper. Her shawl which had slipped from her shoulders streamed out behind her. Her eyes were wide with terror.

"Ma!" she gasped, clutching her mother by the arm. "Didn't Mr. 'n Mrs. Bancroft go last week? — didn't we hear 'em go?"

"Why, yes," said Mrs. Saxton blankly. "They were goin' to take that nine o'clock train at Derry. An' Em'ly Kimbal, she went next day."

"Well, Mrs. Bancroft's come back!" cried the girl hysterically. "She's up there at the house!"

"Oh, my land!" exclaimed Mrs. Saxton.

"I just ran up to peek in the window an' see if they'd taken all their things, an' when I put my face up against the glass there she stood lookin' at me in that empty room. I thought I was goin' to drop right where I was, but I just shut my eyes an' give one scream an' ran. It was awful!"

The girl dropped into a chair. Her mother stood looking at her for several minutes. Then she threw her apron over her head and went to the kitchen door.

"Ezra!" she called, "Ezra! Just you step here a minute."

Deacon Saxton appeared with an empty milk-pail in each hand.

"I want you should come up to the parsonage along with Milly an' me. Mrs. Bancroft's up there. Somethin's wrong or she wouldn't have come back."

Deacon Saxton followed his wife unquestioningly as she led the way across the yard and up the street and turned in at the parsonage gate. Milly, pale and frightened, brought up the rear. Mrs. Saxton scuttled around to the woodshed and, returning with the key, handed it to her husband. He unlocked the door and they entered the bare, forlorn-looking hall.

"She's in the parlor!" Milly whispered shrinkingly.

The two women stood huddled close together as the Deacon tiptoed over to the parlor door and pushed it open, gently. There by the mantel stood Mrs. Bancroft, slenderly erect in her black gown, the white shawl falling about her shoulders.

"Beg pardon, ma'm," said Deacon Saxton, retreating abashed, and pulling off his hat.

The lady stared immovably out of the window with her pretty, colorless face. There was not a quiver of her stylishly-clad figure. With a gasp Mrs. Saxton brushed by her husband. She crossed the room and caught hold of the white shawl — then she leaned back weakly against the mantel-piece. The power of speech seemed suddenly to have forsaken her.

"There ain't any real Mrs. Bancroft," she said at length, dully. "There hain't never been. She's just one of them wire figgers, with a wax head, they have in stores."

Her bewildered gaze encountered a piece of white paper pinned upon the sleeve. She unfastened it with trembling fingers and crossing over to the window, read it aloud by the fading light. It was in Mrs. Kimbal's handwriting.

I promised the minister I'd burn up "Mrs. Bancroft" before I went away. But I couldn't seem to do it, nohow. She was all my idea, and the minister he didn't like deceivin' folks — but he was drowed to it, poor man! If it hadn't been for her he couldn't never have raised the money to build the new church, and there's so many match-making folks in Windham its going to be a lesson to them to know the truth.

Mrs. Saxton's eyes travelled consciously from the immovable figure by the mantel to where Milly stood beside her father in the doorway.

"Em'ly Kimbal never spoke a truer word!" she said.

The Engineer and the Pilot.*

BY NATHANIEL DICKINSON.

PATTERSON leaned out over the low rail of the gangway-port and surveyed the river above. It was black, as black as the pall of the sky above it, as black as the grime on the engineer's hands, as the frown on his dark face and the mood which caused it whenever the picture of the dapper young pilot, in his natty blue uniform and black-visored cap, on the upper deck, passed before his mind and stirred afresh the hate which lay smouldering in the depths of his soul.

There was something soothing, then, in the very anger of the elements to the engineer of the Sayville. The startling, vivid whiteness of the white-caps which here and there showed their teeth against the black-green of the river, the dull glow of red, half-way up the northern horizon, which marked the track of the coming storm, and the yellow-white glare of the twisting lightning which played against the inkiness in the northeast were all akin to his mood, and strangely comforting.

"We'll get it," he prophesied gloomily to himself, "and it looks like hell-fire," he vagarized, and then fell to wondering what hell was like, and if it could be any worse than his present existence.

For Patterson was in love, and only this morning he had discovered the full metes and bounds of this passion and the other great one — Hate. For the one he was indebted to a certain girl whom he had known but a month; for the other to the young pilot of the Sayville, whom he had known for years.

That it was all his own doing, this present condition of affairs, did not tend to ease his hate, or his love. Two weeks ago he and Bolton, the pilot, had been friends, and harmony reigned between the engine-room and the pilot-house. Then, in a moment of that

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* Copyright secured in Great Britain.

foolish confidence which lovers have, he had taken the pilot to call on the girl he was to marry, and this had been the beginning of the end as far as the rough engineer was concerned, for the pilot's hands were not grimy, and his voice was low and pleasant, and well in keeping with his good-looking face and active figure, and then, too, conscience and love are sworn enemies, and the girl was not without her charms. So, from a friend of both, the pilot became a friend of each, which is vastly different in such cases, and a coolness grew between him and Patterson, for his visits became too frequent, and were too obviously welcomed for the engineer to pass unnoticed.

But Patterson's pride was of a nature which kept him silent, and in silence the coolness grew between him and the girl he loved and his old friend, Bolton. And then, this very morning, had come the inevitable. When he had gone to say good-bye to his promised wife, he found her in the little garden he had grown so to care for, in the arms of another man — Bolton.

Something had seemed to snap in him, then, for he had stopped in his tracks with an expression almost of horror in his eyes. He was too dazed to be angry then. It was the going of his faith in woman and in man, and his simple mind needed time to digest this perfidy.

The girl had sprung from the arms of her new lover with a cry of alarm, and he stood ready to fight for his very life with the man he had wronged, for there was that in the other's eyes which was not good to see.

But the big engineer had slowly passed his huge hand across his eyes, turned and walked out the gate and down the street again. There was something terrible in this — more so than if he had vented his rage then and there, and it hung over the two and their clandestine love like a cloud, making her fearing instead of loving, and him strangely awkward.

Now, the cloud had passed from Patterson's brain and left him with one clear thought, and that the desire to kill. Anger which stirred him to the very depths swept over him in waves from time to time and grew on him as he dwelt on his great wrong. Beads of perspiration which were not the result of the temperature of his engine-room stood out on his forehead, and now and then in a sane moment he felt, with a queer sub-consciousness, that his nails were driven into his palms and that every nerve in his whole body was tingling.

The jingle of bells in the engine-room called him back to the present and his post. He cast a last look at the black thunder-storm, and went back to his engine as though he had said a last good-bye to this world.

When the Sayville cast off her moorings at six o'clock and swung away from her dock, the rising storm had already brought night down over the river, and the dull red in the north had faded in the approaching rain.

Up in the pilot-house they had called for full speed in spite of the narrow channel, in the hope that the steamer might run away from the storm, as might well have been the case had this storm, as many other thunder-storms, been localized within a radius of a few miles. But they were in its track, and but a few miles down-stream it overtook the Sayville and swept her decks from stem to stern with a deluge of driving rain.

Down among his throttles and levers Patterson received the signal to slow down to half-speed. The pilot had rung that bell, he knew, and to the wild-eyed engineer there was a subtle mockery in it that awoke afresh the rage in him, that his work had for the time driven out. For a moment he stood motionless, hesitating whether or not to obey the signal and then, his reason coming back to him in a measure, he slowed his engine down.

But a thought had come to him with this hesitation — a thought that widened his eyes and made his head feel strangely light, for it came to him that there was a place on the river, where, if he had hesitated even this short time, it might have meant the death of those in the pilot-house, and this was at the draw-bridge which spanned the river five miles below at Middleburgh.

The draw-men on this and the crew of the steamer were sworn enemies. Time after time the draw had been swung so tardily that the Sayville had to back at full speed to save crashing into it. Once, even, the steamer's forward deck had swept under the slowly swinging draw, and for a fascinating minute the huge structure had hung before the scared faces of those in her pilot-house as her reversed engines held her and then slowly backed her away from danger.

This incident had cost one draw-man his position, but another as inimical had come, and the feud waxed stronger, until of late it had come to be the custom rather than the exception for the Sayville to have to back her engines on entering the narrow channel between the island above the bridge, and the left bank, before the slowly opening draw.

This Patterson knew and counted on in his plan for revenge, and now he blessed these same draw-men as he had often cursed them, down in the bowels of the steamer, and waited all too impatiently in the delirium of his black hate for the time to come when he should know by the signals that they were approaching the bridge. What did it matter to him that with the guilty the innocent might be murdered? What mattered it to him that he was imperilling the lives of two hundred, passengers and officers and crew of the steamer? He had but the thought for one thing, and that was the death of the pilot.

In the pilot-house all was dark but for the shaded binnacle light. Bolton stood at the wheel. At his right hand was the mate, at his left, one of the quartermasters. Far down the river, the lights on the drawbridge twinkled red and green and white in the dark night, and the pilot breathed a sigh of relief, for the river widened below this, and it had been a wild trip through the storm, with the flashes of lightning flooding the river in brilliant light one moment and leaving it in darkness so intense the next that he could not see the forward deck below him.

But now the rain had ceased, and the thunder rumbled in the distance. The river lay black velvet through which the steamer softly crowded her way. Yet the banks were distinguishable now, for the channel had narrowed between the island, in the center of the stream at this place, and the left bank of the river.

The lights on the bridge grew, and out of the night its huge framework took form like some Titan net spread to catch the steamer. They were but a hundred yards from it now. "Give her the whistle," ordered the pilot, and the quartermaster pulled the cord and sent a hoarse blast out over the river, which sounded like the bellow of some huge leviathan, and died away in many echoes among the hills on either side of the stream.

But the lights on the bridge did not change. A bar of light from the steamer's searchlight threw the dripping structure into sudden daylight, and played along the draw, searching each nick and corner with its brilliant rays and sending a path of light down the dark river beyond. Then and only then the men on the draw tardily started to swing it.

The mate swore volubly, for the current ran strong here and even at half-speed the steamer was sweeping down on the draw at the rate of some ten knots.

"Stop her and back her!" he ordered abruptly. Bolton gave the signals, and all three waited expectantly, anxiously. The vibration of the engines ceased, and for a moment the big river-boat glided on in stately silence.

And then, with the structure of the bridge towering but the steamer's own length before it, came the vibrations again, and the Sayville seemed fairly to leap forward, with her engines running at full speed ahead!

For a moment the men in the pilot-house were startled out of speech and action and then, with an inarticulate cry, the mate snatched the bell-cord from the pilot's hand and pulled it furiously. But still the engines pounded ahead at full speed. The steamer's forward deck swept under the draw, which had swung but a few feet, and the towering mass of the bridge loomed before the pilot-house. "Hell!" cried the mate and, his courage deserting him, he flung the pilot-house door open and sprang out, the quartermaster close on his heels.

Bolton, alone, stood at his post. Whatever else his faults, he had the courage which makes heroes. He knew now. It came to him all in a moment, — Patterson's treachery and its cause. In a way, he told himself, he was responsible for the lives of the passengers, of the officers and crew of this boat, for had it not been for him, all this would not have happened. And yet, as he faced death, a last wistful thought of what might have been came to him as the face of the girl passed before his mind's eye in that kaleidoscope of impending dissolution which comes at such a time.

For a moment he stood thus, and then it seemed to him that the mass before him was hurled at his head. He ducked, instinctively. Then came a rending crash, a shudder ran through the steamer, and he was hurled to the deck. As he lay half-stunned he saw the dark mass of the bridge sweep over him, saw the deck-house swept before it like paper, and the big funnels bend and crash to the deck below, and then he saw that the black sky was above him again, and realized that he was still clinging to the wheel, and this, with its strong bracing, had protected him from the deck-house, which had gone to pieces on it. He put it hard over and headed the wreck for the soft bank.

So Patterson, the engineer, did not gain his wish after all. But that was Bolton's last trick at the wheel. His life had been spared, but his nerve had gone forever.

Down in the engine-room they found a raving maniac where once had been the best engineer on the river.

And the third actor in this tragedy — the girl who was to marry each in turn? She is the wife of another.

The Closed Door.*

BY EVELYN SNEAD BARNETT.

HE was a tramp and worse — an unkempt fellow with a roguish, though not unhandsome face and, though his deeds were many and nefarious, there was a plausible something, the very ghost of innocent boyhood about him, that made judges weak and juries lenient.

One day while prowling round citizens' back premises, he strayed to the rear of a church and, seeing a door ajar, looked in, to find himself at the back of a choir, facing a large congregation. As he paused with curiosity, he heard the minister say in his sermon :

“The door is closed !”

This so tickled the tramp that he opened the door wider and stayed a minute or more looking at the lines of well-dressed people listening in decorous comfort to the young minister. And the tramp actually sighed and his features twitched oddly until eyes and nose and mouth seemed to meet ; for, somehow, the picture carried him back to his early home. In fear at the vision he drew back and slipped away, past the choir door to another open door at the end of the narrow hallway.

First peeping to make sure the room was empty, he went in. A fire crackled in the grate and in its comforting warmth the trace of tenderness vanished, leaving the hardened rogue scanning the well-furnished room with alert eyes.

Upon a desk lay some brown, gold-lettered, pasteboard boxes. Cutting them open with a convenient penknife, he brought forth various moneys, which he did not stop to count but tied in a dirty rag evolved from the intricacies of other rags.

All this time he could hear the words of the sermon.

“The door is closed,” repeated the minister.

* Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* Copyright secured in Great Britain.

"That's your third whopper," said the tramp, turning the knob of a large closet, "for this is the third door I've found open."

Inside the closet were vestments — surplices, cassocks, stoles — which the man examined in evident disappointment. But he brightened as he fingered a handsome, new overcoat. He put it on. How soft and warm it was! He strutted before a mirror and started in surprise at the change wrought by the single garment.

"Jee-rusalem! What a fit! Why it's almost like old times!" And again came that uncomfortable softness. What ailed him? Suppose, instead of gambling and drinking and breaking his mother's heart, he had been content with the plodding, stay-at-home life? He might to-day be like that young minister.

Here he had to grin at the mental picture of himself in white gown and embroidered stole; but on top of the grin he swallowed hard and told himself sternly that he was homeless and hungry and could not afford any high-toned ideas.

The mental picture, aided by further discoveries in the closet, suggested something else. Quickly shedding the overcoat and the rags beneath, he took a black clerical suit from a hook and put it on; then he added a silk hat, gazing in the glass all the while in chuckling satisfaction.

"Decent? Well, I should smile." But just then, getting a glimpse at his shoes, his jaw dropped. His feet, bursting through old leather, would be sure to attract attention and perhaps land him in a place he wished to avoid.

"Wonder where's his shoes?" said the rummaging tramp.

There were none to be found, and time was flying; though, as long as he could hear the steady flow of the sermon, he judged he was safe. Finally a pair of goloshes by the side of an umbrella settled the difficulty, and so, putting them on and buttoning his new overcoat to the chin, he was about to tiptoe out, when a handsome leather suit-case offered a last unresisted temptation.

In the street our newly ordained friend felt a strange timidity. In his short career he had acted many rôles, but this was untried. When he realized the probabilities of his action he was scared. He told himself he was too brash — that he was smart enough to know better, and here he had gone and sent himself to the Pen — it was all the fault of that church and those rows of respectable people. And here he swaggered and whistled a lively air to revive his courage.

But just then a lady came by and the sight of a parson doing a jig in the street on Sunday so transfixed her in open-mouthed surprise that it quickly brought him to a sense of the incongruity between clothes and actions.

"Rick Jackson, I'll beg you to remember that preachers have to mind their p's and q's," he said, straightening up.

As he wished to leave the scene of his thefts in short order, he boarded a street car, and when a number of persons alighted in front of a hotel he did the same. In a former attack of respectability he had been a bell-boy, so he was at home in hotels. Having an unusual yearning for water, he sought the dressing-room to wash his face.

Here was also a good chance to examine his spoils, so he bolted the door and opened his valise. It contained these things:

A clean surplice, a black stole, a silk cap, a pair of embroidered forget-me-not slippers, several pairs of socks, one suit of woolen underwear, two clean white shirts with clerical collars, two white neckties, a hair-brush and comb, a tooth-brush, a Bible, a Prayer-book, a card-case filled with cards engraved "The Reverend Carolus Ewell," and lastly an envelope containing a railroad pass to New York and return.

As he realized its value the thief gasped: "What a find! This will carry me hundreds of miles away from the cops. Parson Jackson, you are about to take a vacation, d'ye hear?"

Then he revised his hasty toilet. He washed face, hands, hair; he put on a white shirt and tied a white cravat with a smirking flourish. So pleased was he with results that he could hardly leave the mirror.

Next he counted his cash — ten dollars and forty-four cents, mostly in nickels and pennies — and never a thought gave he to the self-denying children who had gathered it. Then, taking a last look, he decided that the only thing lacking was a shave.

Avoiding the shop in the house, he sought one in the street. The negro barber was obsequiously polite. He lathered, he cut, he clipped, he brushed, he dusted — but he was finally through.

When Rick asked the cost he was told:

"Nothin', sah; we never makes no charge to preachers gittin' shaved on Sundays."

Rick thanked him courteously, and passed out reflecting.

He made his way to the station, and, consulting a time-table, learned that a through train left for New York in half an hour. When the time was up he joined the crowd and entered the gate, pass in hand.

It was a ticklish moment, and Rick held his breath. The guard gave man and pass a hasty look. "All right," he nodded, and Rick had to repress further inclination to caper.

"That precious slip of paper," he thought, "Now remember, sir, you are the Rev. Carolus Ewell, and until you get to New York you have to travel in style and toe the mark."

He approached the sleeper. "Number, sir?" demanded the conductor.

"A berth, please," said Rick softly.

"Here you are, number seven. No, don't pay now — come round and c'lect after we start."

So far so good, but our traveller sought his seat in trepidation, keeping mighty quiet. But when the train moved and each moment carried him farther away from danger his assurance returned.

The conductor came to collect for the berth.

"What's the score?" asked the parson.

"Regular price five — but for you two-fifty — new rule."

"At last we have struck a perfesh with some pickin's," thought Rick, as he paid. "Free shaves, free tickets, and half-fares. Whew! The only thing lacking is a good, solid dinner, and I won't ask for no preacher's prices neither, if I can just get it quick."

This last need was not long unsupplied, for soon the dining-car was ready and, with the more gentlemanly of his fellow-travellers as models, and a draft on memory, our friend ate somewhat as a clergyman should. Several of the passengers tried to talk with him, but he answered in monosyllables, for it had been many a day since he had spoken their language, and he was afraid of self-betrayal.

Every one treated him courteously. He who had been kicked, cuffed, and "moved on" — who for months had seen warmth and comfort and brightness only from the outside, now found himself the object of respectful attention. Truly, the door had opened wide!

As the hours passed he became more accustomed to his sudden rise in the social scale, and words and phrases of well-taught boyhood recurred to his memory. The ease with which he had changed his identity begot confidence — evidently there was nothing in his appearance to breed suspicion. To be sure, those rubber goloshes looked a trifle odd, and how they did draw!

As soon as possible he had his berth made up and, sliding behind the curtains, removed the painful overshoes; then, raising the window, he dropped his worn-out shoes into the flying darkness. In his eyes no luxury ever equalled that bed in the sleeping-car.

"And to think it's my own fault that these things ain't mine honestly!" was his last conscious reflection.

In the morning he awoke, vigorous and fresh, put on the forget-me-not slippers and rang his bell.

"My shoes, porter, please."

"Shoes, sah? Ain't seen no shoes o' yourn."

"Indeed! I put them out last night." Which was true.

"Did you, Boss? I must er skipped 'em." But vigorous search failed to bring them to light.

The porter was distressed. "I'm honiss, Boss, but somebody muss er stole 'em, an they'll suspek me. If you jess won't raise er row —"

The appeal struck a responsive chord. "Well, well," replied the parson, "It's awkward, as I haven't another pair with me, but I suppose I can wear slippers for the rest of the trip, so mum's the — ahem! — we'll say no more about it."

In the night several passengers had been added and one of them, a beautiful young girl in a velvet hat with shading plumes, attracted the parson's attention. She was alone and evidently unused to travel; for she glanced nervously about. There was something so appealing in her fragile beauty and changing color that Rick could not keep from staring. At a long stop he went outside to stretch his limbs, and when he came back to his seat his pretty neighbor had gone.

Shortly afterwards he was reading the paper when he felt eyes fixed upon him. Glaucing up, he saw behind the glass door of the private compartment a man's face framed in the oval. The face dodged his gaze, but not before he had seen upon it an expression that left no doubt in his guilty mind that his short dream was at an end.

"Run to earth," he ejaculated. "It was too good to last."

But in the extremity the man's blood rose, and he resolved not to yield without a fight. He even thought of taking a flying leap from the train, and went to the back of the car to reconnoitre. As he stood on the platform, trying to devise means of escape, he heard voices, and his enemy approached, accompanied by the porter. Rick had an innocent look that was his chief stock in trade. He tried it then as he looked the stranger square in the face.

"Boss," said the porter, "dis here gent wants to speak to you on pertikler business."

Rick stifled an impulse to seize the "gent" by the throat, and waited.

"I suppose you know why I want you?" asked the man, politely enough.

"I think I do," answered Rick, with equal courtesy, though his face was pale.

"If you will let us do the thing quietly and not cause any excitement among the passengers, you will find it to your advantage," said the stranger.

"If there's any excitement, you'll have to make it yourself," said Rick.

"Good! In about ten minutes we'll be ready, and nobody will suspect what we are up to." And, much to the parson's astonishment, his captor left him, though the porter, a great, strong fellow, remained.

"Curus business, Boss," remarked the darky. "With the train a-goin' a mile a minute, it's what might be called marryin' in haste."

The parson only half attended. He was too much absorbed in thought to understand the porter's words. Those that followed made him jump.

"You 'pears putty sober 'bout it, but you'll be fixed, you bet.

The perspective bridegroom have a fat pocket-book sho; he done gimme a five erready."

"What? What's that you say?" the parson stammered.

"I say Mr. St. John done gimme er fiver."

"You don't say so," the parson managed to utter. "I'm glad — why I'm just as glad as I can be!"

The porter had never met with such ready sympathy. Ministers were surely a good lot.

"See here, my friend," said this one, thinking like a flash, "go to that young fellow and tell him I said yes too soon. I'll have to think about it."

As the porter disappeared the parson deliberated. "Rick Jackson, I wonder if you dare? The risk is awful, but a fee will be mighty neat."

He went back into the car and returned with the prayer-book, and, after some delay, found the marriage ceremony.

"It's plain; it's short. I've heard it a hundred times. I've a mind to try. Let's see," studying the rubric, "I must have a license. I'll make a point of that."

He was reading when the porter and Mr. St. John came back. "What's wrong?" asked the latter.

"Lots of things," answered the parson. "In the first place, I can't marry you without a license."

Mr. St. John smilingly produced a paper. "As long as we are in this State, this document is good," said he, triumphantly.

Rick took the paper and examined it, frowning critically. It was the first of its kind he had ever seen, but he said:

"It seems to be O. K. You see I have to be careful. If there should be anything wrong, and as you are a stranger to me I have no way of telling, and it should come out later, it — it might even cost me my place."

"If such a thing should happen," cried the gentleman, "I'll see you don't starve before you find other means of support."

The parson, ignoring the trace of contempt in this remark, replied pompously, "In that case I consent. Shall I follow you?"

Mr. St. John led the way to the drawing-room of the sleeper, where a young girl was waiting, whom Rick recognized as his pretty neighbor in the velvet hat.

Half frightened the young thing was, and solemn, as she raised her innocent eyes to the parson's, with a look of reverence that made him turn away his head with a gulp.

"I hope it's all right," he said, with a shrinking that surprised himself. And the bridegroom whispered:

"Her father is a selfish old fellow who expects her to waste her young life attending to his whims."

"Am I doing wrong?" pleaded the girl. "My father doesn't really need me, and twice has — Oh, I can't say anything against him! But I believe — I feel sure that I am not necessary to anybody's happiness but Mr. St. John's," and she had to struggle to control her tears.

Rick Jackson's head swam. Here was an innocent thing asking his advice, looking up to him as if he were good. How he wished he were good! What wouldn't he give to be a real parson right now. Then he bit his mustache nervously, for he seemed to hear that minister saying:

"The door is closed."

With a start he brought himself back to the present. The door was closed. He would go ahead and get that fee. It was too late to turn back now. He opened the prayer-book at "Dearly beloved," and read through the paragraph haltingly. Then he began:

"I require and charge you both as ye shall answer at the dreadful Day of Judgment when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed," — The words seemed to burn his lips. The book fell heavily to the floor.

"I can't," he groaned. "With her looking at me that way, I can't do her a wrong." Then, as both seemed astonished, "Do what you will with me — her eyes draw the truth — I'm no minister — it's only clothes. Get somebody else to marry you. I wish I could. Oh, what wouldn't I give to deserve her look."

"What's all this?" demanded Mr. St. John.

"I can't tell you before her. It would kill me. Come outside and you shall hear." And once more standing on the back platform, Rick Jackson made a clean breast of his life and the theft.

Edward St. John took him by the hand, and, full of pity and kindness, said:

"Do not despair, young man. You have a lot of good left in you still. I am going to help you open that closed door."

Before another sun had risen, two telegrams had been sent. One to a selfish old man said:

Hildegarde and I were married by Bishop Delaunay in New York this evening.

E. ST. JOHN.

The other went to the Reverend Carolus Ewell:

Overcoat with valise and money returned to-night.

RICHARD JACKSON.

In the valise was a letter:

Rev. C. EWELL, Dear Sir:—

I send back your overcoat and things—but the door isn't closed, as you said. It's open wide, and a good man has taken me in. You can do what you want with me, but, no matter what happens, I am going to try never to take anybody in again as long as we both shall live.

Mr. St. John says it was the shirts, and something about the devil mounting to the belfry. I say it was your clothes and an angel in a velvet hat with feathers. The devil was me, and the belfry is a rising position with E. St. John & Co.

Hoping you haven't missed your clothes much, and thanking you for the loan of them, I am your obedient servant,

RICK JACKSON.

P. S.—Remember I stand ready to face the music if you think I should.

But Rick Jackson has never been called to account for his last offence against the law.

Love's Immune.*

BY ALICE E. BROOKS.

HESTER GORDON apparently enjoyed the character of Immune, and lived up to it to the best of his ability. He was invested with a certain repression and wearied indifference while in the presence of women, but with his own sex he was a jolly, companionable fellow. He was first-rate at any game — poker, polo, billiards, and even tennis with petticoats — sang a comic song, or a sentimental one, for that matter, distinctively well, and was no mean athlete. With all this society stock in trade — stuff attractive and altogether effective with women — he pointedly refused all dealings and congenialities with them. Should he occasionally be beguiled into a social function, it was with the air of a fellow being hanged against his will. His insouciance approached, yet never reached, the limit of rudeness — he seeming to possess the enviable faculty of pleasing without effort. Many a man, overflowing with desire to conciliate, has been condemned for a trifling faux pas which, in the manner of Ches Gordon, would have been ignored or dubbed a charming peculiarity. Thus one sins — another is canonized — yet both equally faulty. Prejudiced judges, these women — dual natures, angel and devil.

Gordon's bachelor apartments were marvels of luxury, worked out with the main idea of unfemininity. There were abundant decorations of pipes and rapiers, tomahawks and Navajo blankets, hunting scenes, horses and dogs — some of them genuine Bonheurs — busts of statesmen and ascetics, tobacco jars from all countries, cut-glass decanters, always full (a special attraction), — and many other devices that would preclude the possibility of any leaning toward the gentler sex, but rather confirm his distinctive title. Phrenologically speaking, his bump of Amativeness was abnormally developed; therefore, either Phrenology was radically wrong, or the Immune was sailing under false colors — was a fraud, and might, could, would, and should love a love of the most pronounced type. Any one of a number of women of his acquaintance was fully calculated to arouse such a passion, but some of them had worked to effect his subjugation with only the result of chasing him further into retirement. It would have been a possible benefit to have sealed him up in his selfish seclusion to meditate on lost opportunities — for he didn't seem to appreciate the fact that, in his three decades of existence, he might have flirted, married, and divorced — and flirted, married, and divorced again. Such neglected possibilities would doubtless prod him in his sere and yellow leaf, should his obstinate refusal of the gods' good gifts not punish him in his heyday.

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* Copyright secured in Great Britain.

"Chester, Miss Edgarly requested me to persuade you over to meet her friend — a lovely importation from Australia." I had just returned from the Edgarly box during an intermission in the L'Aiglou of the divine Sara. Chester raised his eyebrows, drew his thin lips together, and intently regarded his polished finger-tips. I waited.

"Confound it, Chester, eliminate that bored expression — their lorgnettes are leveled at us."

"Really," said he, provokingly unconscious.

"You are not obliged to go — nothing depends upon it," said I, nonchalantly, endeavoring to cloak my eagerness — two pairs being, in this instance, better than a royal flush.

He glanced in their direction, at the same time bowing most graciously. Those were his tactics, indifference and courtliness, or rather a high-mightiness. He gave a quick second look, interested and admiring — a lightning change that could discount the profession. The transformation was not inspired by Miss Edgarly — she had exercised high art on him, fruitlessly — missed him and leveled me, and, happily for me, seemed well satisfied with the substitute. To my intense satisfaction, Chester arose at once and, with alacrity, accompanied me to the side of Miss Edgarly and her friend.

Chester was a goner.

Young Cupid got in some good work on short notice, attacking the redoubts of his enemy with shell, shrapnel, and canister — beauty, smiles, and subtle flattery. The engagement was short and decisive, resulting in the prompt capitulation of the Immune — and, alas, that a truthful historian should be forced to chronicle it, the victor was a madam — either a widow, which was bad enough — or a wife, which was retribution out of all proportion to Chester's sins against love. Mrs. Lansdoun, wife or widow, was a charmer in face, figure, and manner. She knew all the lines, and there was no discounting her ability to manipulate them.

After the box incident Gordon was a changed man. From the grub was evolved the butterfly, fluttering where sunshine was brightest and flowers the sweetest. Society was courted assiduously, and our bachelor communing was a joy of the past. His every moment was devoted to pleasure — balls, routs, coaching-parties, boating, house-parties — anything and everything that could give him the coveted opportunity of being near Mrs. Lansdoun. The delight of association was mutual — they were affinities, made for each other, and all that. Mornings as well as evenings found him by her side. Charming in the perfection of a ball dress, she was a vision in the negligee of morning, so dainty, so picturesque — so altogether desirable as to tempt a man to smash any number of decalogues. Tracing the intricacies of Battenberg, her slim hands illustrated the poetry of motion, as the poisoning of a butterfly, or the flitting of an iridescent humming-bird. How tantalizingly tempting — so near, and yet so untouchable! Chester devoured her with his eyes — she innocently unconscious! Bah! she read him, through the down-dropt transparencies serving as eyelids, as with a searchlight. Conversation had lapsed into an eloquent silence, punctuated, now and then, by a few low-hummed notes in a sweet treble, and the click of the busy needle against the gold cap of her middle finger. The hiatus was ended by Chester:

"Golden-rod is gorgeous on the island. I was over yesterday. The earth seems gilded with it."

"Your selfishness is reprehensible. Van and I were wishing yesterday that we might go over. She says the island is an Eden, lacking only the Man and Woman." She darted one of her treacherously sweet glances at Chester.

"My yawl and I are always at your disposal. You have but to signify your wish and convenience." He was ready to engineer a balloon ascension had she expressed a desire.

"Let us go to-morrow. (Get up a party, you dear, delightful man!)" she exclaimed, all enthusiasm and childish delight. Artful or innocent, she was altogether fetching. Interlacing her white fingers and raising the fringes of her blue-gray eyes, she could enravish any sinner, and well-nigh a saint. Chester was not a saint. Ergo.

"And may I take you?" he asked, still performing the optical cannibalism.

"I supposed that understood."

"To be in Eden with Eve is as near heaven as I wish to be."

"Adam lost Eden," she said, suggestively

"On account of Eve," quoth the Man.

"On account of the Serpent," added the Woman.

"All things well lost for love," declared the Man, and seemed in no degree conscious of heresy.

"It is just possible for the modern Eve to manage things better, and be able to pre-empt a homestead with love included." She bent over her lace, intently examining the last spider-web as she threw the deliberate challenge. Arachne wove webs of divers designs.

From Chester's eyes flashed great darts of desire, love, adoration. He arose abruptly and went to a window outlooking to the island. After a moment Mrs. Lansdoune's childish voice clipped off the first syllable of his name.

"Ches — Mr. Gordon," — how naturally, how beautifully she could blush! — "what attracts?"

"Eden — but it seems so far away."

"Not twenty-four hours! But why yearn for Eden when you have Eve beside you?"

"Mrs. Lansdoune, you were surely sent for man's undoing." Taking her idle hand, he said in a concentrated voice, "To-morrow we will gather golden-rod and happiness together in Paradise."

A profound obeisance, and he was gone.

"How intense!" she yawned behind her lace-work. "He is a first-rate actor, and could almost persuade one of his sincerity. Such flirtations are artistic and highly entertaining."

That night I cornered Ches in his apartments.

"Villain, at last I have thee!" I said, dramatically, as I entered his half-closed door.

"Come in, Manning," he said, without so much as removing the cigar from his lips. "Your chair is vacant and awaits you."

I sat down.

"Smoke?" He shoved the stand nearer to me. "New brand—think you will like it. In their smoke I see faces."

"H—m, yes. Men or women."

"A woman's,"—with emphasis on the A.

"Of what type?"

"Mrs. Lansdoune's, of course," he declared shamelessly.

"Your attention to that lady is quite marked—people are talking."

"Let them."

"Is she wife or widow?"

After shifting his cigar to the corner of his mouth, and sending a series of fragrant rings floating upward, each, doubtless, framing a face, he replied deliberately, "I do—not—know."

"Do—not—know?" I exploded. "My God, man! and allowing yourself to love her?"

"I have not admitted such a fact."

"There's devilish little need—it is self-evident."

He took his cigar between the middle and index finger, and with the little finger daintily flicked off a two-inch length of ashes, remarking inconsequently, "Langly's new mare is a wonder. Have you seen her?"

This to divert conversation.

"Yes," I snapped out, "but she isn't the only fast creature in sight." I thought that retort would rattle him—but it didn't.

"That's so," he said, placidly ignoring my covert meaning. He was exasperating! "Sansen's horse is her equal as a trotter. I say, Manning, I came near forgetting a commission. A party of us go boating to-morrow across to the island. You are expected to bring Miss Ruse."

"That's a mean advantage to take of a fellow. I have a great admiration for Miss Ruse, but, don't you know, a fellow has his preferences."

"I appreciate the situation. Miss Edgarly, no doubt, deplores her duties as hostess, since they impose the loss of your society. She goes with her guest, a cousin from Yale."

"Ah! that puts a new face on the proposition, and I shall be delighted to accompany Miss Ruse. What is the programme?"

"The ladies covet the treasures of golden-rod on the island, so we go to levy tribute of its wealth. Walks — talks — lunch — love, and, perhaps, shooting the falls — who knows?"

"I am not ambitious to do any stunts. Possibly you intend to be star performer in the last-mentioned specialty," I said jokingly.

A strange expression crept over Gordon's chiseled features, as he said, "Should it fall to my portion, I will not hesitate."

We were standing. I laid my hands on his shoulders, and, looking into his eyes, said earnestly, "Chester, my dear friend, don't let this woman destroy you. Ascertain if she be widow or wife. If the first, win her if you can — if the last, break away — it means ruin."

"It is too late, for, wife or widow — I love her."

"Oh, damnation! — Good-night, Ches," I slammed the door, rushed down the stairs three at a stride, ran over a small street gamin at the door, and was appropriately blessed, which I generously rewarded, and came to my senses after a sprint of a half-dozen blocks.

Duly gathered the pleasure-seekers on the morrow. By eleven A.M. a dozen rowboats pointed their noses into the sloping sands awaiting the jolly party. Chappie Grant, believing himself authority on all things pertaining to water, from yachts to puddle-ducks, thought it in order to spiel a period upon the proper approach to the island — as if every shaver in our town had not been coached as to the dangers that lurked around that bit of terra firma.

"Those who manage the tiller" — he stood on a cracker-box, and looked nobby and nautical in white from cap to canvas shoes — “will do well to land from midway to north of the Island. The meeting of the waters at its south end, just before reaching the falls, forms a whirlpool dangerous of approach. To the midway and north.”

A cheer went up with a right good will. Porter Haddiman proposed a “vote of thanks to Ulysses II., who has saved his countrymen from destruction.”

Seconded and passed.

One by one the boats shot out into the channel of the river, leaving a glittering trail behind them. With the current they drifted lazily down the stream in the warm September sunshine, a party of typical sybarites, with Chappie Grant in the lead—Chester Gordon and Mrs. Lansdoune bringing up the rear.

All being safely landed, and boats made fast to willows that fringed the banks, the young people at once began laying tribute of autumnal treasures. Golden-rod and marguerites and wild ageratum—branches of reddening sweet-gum—leaves of crimson bramble and gorgeously tinted persimmon, the gay Banditti accumulated. The first relish being satisfied, nooks and crannies were sought, where tender thoughts and friendly confidences were exchanged with poetical abandon. Miss Ruse being, at the last moment, unavoidably prevented from accompanying the party, I was relegated to the unenviable position of a solitary stag. The old ballad, “Two is company, three is none,” rang in my head, and, leaving the crowd, I found a capital lounging-place at the foot of a gigantic oak upon a crag overhanging a grotto. I was soon blissfully unconscious. There were multifarious reasons for my somnolence; to wit, the warm sunshine, the softly stirring leaves, the isolation—and, above all, late hours the night before. About half-awake, I heard voices below. Before I realized my position, I was up to my neck in undesirable certainty.

“Men are so tiresome.” It was Mrs. Lansdoune’s siren voice.

“You tempted me.”

“How ungenerous! I believed you above crimination.”

“But you do love me, Amina? It cannot be my fate to love but once, and that in vain,” pleaded Chester.

“How well you simulate. One would almost believe you in truly earnest.”

"I wish you to believe — believe that I love you — love you — love you!"

"But you mustn't — you know — really must not, Mr. Gordon."

"Do you think I can put my love on and off, as a garment? If it offend you, there is no help for it. You are the beginning and end of all my hope of happiness. Don't play with me, Amina, — it is too real. I know your heart is mine — you have assured me in a thousand sweet ways. Only let me hear it from your lips."

A little scream, half-suppressed, smote the air.

"You must not touch me — you have misunderstood me — I do not love you — it is all a mistake — I thought you meant a passing flirtation," fell from her lips with frightened accelerando.

"Flirtation? My God! woman, flirtation?"

"Yes — nothing more." Was that a sob?

"Amina, Amina, tell me there is nothing to banish hope?"

"There is — I am a wife — I thought you knew," she sobbed.

Softly, treacherously, as the Serpent's voice in Eden, fell the next words; "But, Amina, — if you love me!"

"But I do not — how can I make you understand? I do not! I have no thought for you, nor any one but dear old John."

A silence fell — not even the rustle of the leaves to punctuate it. How I wished to sneak away from my unhappy position, but it was too late. At last after some moments (or was it a century?) Gordon arose, saying: "Forgive me for any consequence that may follow this unhappy episode. You do not, yet, appreciate what it means for us. Come."

They walked off, and I was deucedly relieved.

Four numbers of the programme — walks, talks, lunch, love, — had been disposed of — the fifth bothered me. What if such a thing should happen! The thought kept bobbing up — and always associated with Gordon. I tried to read his face — no use, it was Sphinx-like.

Preparations for homegoing diverted my apprehensions. The boats were laden with the spoils of beauty — transient wealth — and each vied with the other in original decorations. Ches wove a coronet of ageratum and crowned Mrs. Lansdoune as Queen of the Banditti. How blue her eyes shone under the flowery circlet!

Gordon's face had lost its cold expression, and on it seemed to rest a tender pity — sorrowful, it struck me, in every line.

The position of the boats was relatively the same as at the start in the morning — Chappie Grant in the lead, Gordon in the rear. Ches was delayed in the start, and the party was some rods upstream, when our attention was attracted by an exclamation from Grant.

"Look, Gordon is pulling for the falls!" The boats came to a standstill. Gordon raised his hat, and Mrs. Lansdoune gaily waved her handkerchief.

"Oh! let's go on," said Haddiman. "He wants to give Mrs. Lansdoune a glimpse of the whirlpool — a sight worth seeing."

The conjecture is plausible, and the oars click again in their locks, speeding the gay party homeward. I can not hush the suspicion within me, and dare not give it utterance — results may not justify it. Creepy with fears, I turn my boat down-stream. Ches plies his oars vigorously, though going with the current. His yawl seems to fly. He nears the meeting waters. "Take care, Gordon!" I cry, but my voice seems to go no further than my lips. Good God! how his boat trembles — it is caught by the eddying current — around it goes in a circle — he throws his oars into the pool — (Merciful Heavens, why can't I wake from this dream?) he catches the terrified woman passionately to his breast, her arms reaching out to me — a woman's voice skims over the waters — the boat shoots out at a tangent to the vortex and shivers on the crest of the falls.

Society called it a sad accident — I knew the truth.

The Man Who Went Back.*

BY VIRIDIAN GREENE.

IF you should ever go mirage-hunting from Yuba City out toward the Sutter Buttes, you would have the upper Sacramento on your left, wheat fields on your other side, and an amazingly dusty road under your feet. You would be pretty sure to find your mirage, if the sky and the time, of day were right. I did, but that was not the end of my finding — in a camp at the foot of the Buttes nearest the river I found Fanshawe. And this is where my story should begin, as it never could have been told at all if I had not found him there and then, and had not happened on the very day of all days when it would have been the end of things, if he had not been found, and the beginning of Heaven knows what if he had.

For Tom Fanshawe was the man who went back. And I was the man who kept trace of him until he should return, if so be he could and would. Everybody who knew him knew these things, but not just in this way. That is why I am telling the whole story, and this is how I came by the right to tell it.

Seven years before I went mirage-hunting Tom Fanshawe and I had said our last words to a college commencement audience, taken a hurried flight to our Middle West former homes, lived and loved a little with our own people, made our farewells before the end of a month, and by the last day of another had put on miners' boots, shirts, and other manners in a mining camp near the headwaters of the Sacramento. Timbuctoo, they called it. "But why?" Missionaries never go there, and as for cassowaries —.

How we lived in camp, how others acted toward us, and toward each other shall not be told by me. Not till you forget that there was once a Bret Harte. Besides, very little of the history of those years belongs to this tale. Enough it is, to say that we held by

* Copyright, 1906, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* Copyright secured in Great Britain.

each other, took our share of ups and downs with the rest, kept out of the clutches of such villains as we happened to be attractive to, and started home at the end of the fifth year with a fairly comfortable bit of gold in our possession. But it was not gold that led us to these experiences, nor the acquirement of it that released us. It was life, as you shall hear.

These are all the facts that seem to have any bearing on this story. All, though afterwards I saw that one thing, had I known enough to heed it, might have changed matters greatly. Fanshawe often used to say to me when we were in bed in our cabin, especially on rainy nights, "Thomson," — Thomson is my middle name — "Thomson, I wish I had not left my mother so long; I know she is lonely."

I forgot that I had known one man, as big and strong as Tom, who had died of homesickness, and tried to comfort him with half-jesting, though kindly words. But in my heart I knew that I should never have left that mother, if she had been mine. She was the most beautiful woman I ever saw, — body, mind, and spirit.

One Sunday morning, after a stormy night of thrashing rain and roaring wind, Tom rose by candle-light to write letters for the weekly mail; half-asleep, I heard him moving about, looking for his pen and ink. "Get up, you log. I'm too homesick to live. Let's go home," he said.

"Write your letters, you infant, and let me alone."

It was broad daylight when Tom's hand on my shoulder waked me suddenly. "Oh, get up," he said, with anguish in his voice, and all the color out of his face, "something's wrong at home. We must start at once."

"What ——."

He interrupted excitedly, "I saw my mother, — she was here in this room. I saw her, I tell you. She stood just by the table where I was writing to her. I had just written, 'Oh, I want you, mother,' and she stood by me. As I live, she stood there. I saw the color of her eyes, the turn of her neck, her gray dress, the thin white stuff about her neck, — Oh, you remember how she looked," he cried, covering his face with his hands.

"You must have dreamed ——" I began.

"Don't," he wailed, "she is dead, and I whom she loved above all else in the world, have left her alone all these years, and to die wanting me."

"No," I said, "I do not believe she is dead. I once had a friend who thought that she had had such a vision——."

"'Thought' she had? I know what I have seen," he cried.

"Yes, yes, but this meant only sorrow, not death. When she went home, she found her father in sore trouble; it was her father she had seen. But we will go home to your mother, Tom. Come, let's begin at once to get ready."

"Do you mean it?" he said, trembling and flinging the tears from his face.

"I mean it. You will see."

Getting off was a matter of merely a few hours, thanks to our habit of keeping everything square between ourselves and others, as far as camp-etiquette permitted. We left for Marysville that afternoon.

As we neared the end of our journey overland, Tom grew more and more restless. "I wish I could go back to the time when I was fifteen, and leave out these years away from my mother. Oh, you don't know," he groaned, when I told him he was talking morbid nonsense. "You don't know."

"But you are going home," I said, "to be with her to the end of her life."

"Ah, to the end of her life." But his face was troubled.

"She has always been well, — always the most splendidly strong woman I ever knew, Tom."

"Yes, oh, yes." But he answered as if he hardly comprehended what I was saying.

On our arrival at the little country town near our homes, we hastened at once across the fields, and soon plunged into the thick grass of the blossoming orchard, through whose moonlit boughs we caught a glimpse of the home-porch. As I lingered to gather up Tom's traveling-bag, which he had flung down the moment he saw her, the happy fellow clasped his mother in his arms with the words: "Mother, mother, I will never leave you again. Life is not life without you."

"Other Son," said Mrs. Fanshawe to me next morning, — so she had always called me since my own mother had left me alone in the world, — "Other Son, I am glad you have come home now. Do not tell Tom, but I have been ailing a little lately, which, as you know, is almost a portent for me, who am never ill."

"What is it?"

"An aching head, a dulness, nothing more. It may be the spring weather, so warm these few days. And you will stay with us? There is no one at your home now to need you. This is your home, you know."

"But let me bring a doctor, let me do something."

"No, no, it may be nothing, and it would alarm Tom needlessly."

Acquiescing, I resolved to watch for any signs of illness, and to speak to her son, if need be. The first week went forward happily enough, except for a sense of uneasiness on my part. Tom seemed to have forgotten all his forebodings. I never saw him happier. At the week's end there dropped out of a clear sky by way of the Mill Center stage-coach, a distant cousin of Isabel Fanshawe's, — Isabel Droone, by name.

"I had no place to go or — to be, Cousin Isabel," she faltered. "My mother — my mother said that when I was a little girl I looked like you, and that if she — that if I should be left alone — I should go to you. I am a teacher; I wrote first for the school here, and they have given it to me. But I want my own people to live with; will you have me, Cousin Isabel?" All this to us, astonished, on the porch one evening.

"Why, little Isabel! Why, why!" And Tom's mother led her in with kisses and tears. "I am so glad you have come; I needed you, I did not know how much, until now that I see you. Yes, you are like the picture I used to see in the looking-glass — very much."

No, I must not linger over those happy days, so soon over. What befell a little later has made them a painful memory. We waked one morning to find Mrs. Fanshawe ill with a burning fever, in heart-breaking delirium, unconscious of our presence. Tom hung over her in an ecstasy of grief, soothing her, tending her, never leaving her a moment.

Because human nature can endure far more than human nature thinks it can when it is not under stress, we endured those terrible weeks as if we had had each the strength of ten. Tom was never tired, never sleepy, never hungry; he fought Death with alternate hope and despair. At the end of the sixth week the heart so sorely taxed with fever failed, and the mother's life departed.

I led Tom, unresisting, from his mother's bedside; he neither spoke nor wept, but dropped in a stupor on his bed, where he lay all night in a sleep from which I could not rouse him next day till noon, when he merely looked at me without recognition, and fell back into the same heavy slumber. When he waked again, it was without intelligence in his eyes, fever burning his body, and strange, gentle words flowing from his lips, as a child talking to his mother.

In all those stricken weeks which followed, Isabel Droone and I, and neighbors who came in to help us, heard day and night, whenever the dear boy did not sleep, the same questionings and answerings of a conversation directed toward his mother. There was no memory of illness or separation, no word of man's work or anxieties. Sometimes, in his most quiet moments, he seemed to be listening to some lovely story, and would say, "Oh, mother, tell me that again." Sometimes, "Sing me that song again, mother." Then he would sleep, and his talk would be of morning sights and sounds, duties and pleasures, when he waked again.

One mid-day, while Miss Droone stood looking down upon him as he lay in a death-like slumber, he suddenly opened his eyes, looked in her face, and said, "Why, mother, you are up early. I am lazy," made an effort to rise, smiled feebly, and fell asleep. We thought death had come, but he slept on for hours, and we held our breath in hope. At dusk he waked again, and asked for his mother; smiled when he saw Isabel, took some broth from her hand and slept again.

"Let him think so, then; his life hangs on the merest thread," said the old doctor, when Isabel had told him that Tom had mistaken her for his mother. "All depends now on what we can do and not undo in the next few hours, and days."

Weeks of convalescence brought Tom's big body well forward on the road to health, but a curious obsession held his mind to the very point where it had seemed fixed in his illness; he had gone back to his boyhood; he still thought Isabel Droone was his mother.

He seemed to have forgotten everything that had taken place since his fifteenth year. The interests of that time began to engage his attention. He had been very much occupied in his boyhood in making collections of birds and small animals.

He began to rummage among the remnants of his old museum, long since packed away in the garret. Later, he began to set traps and snares in the woods and by the streams, and renewed his correspondence with the British Museum and other institutions relative to the sale and exchange of specimens.

When Miss Droone went back to her school, he took his books and went with her; he seemed puzzled. Why should she teach? Hadn't they money enough? Oh, the people wanted her, there was so little to do at home, then she could be with him more of each day, and the school was small and easy and pleasant. Didn't he like her for a teacher? "Surely, mother."

The little neighborhood knew all about our singular trouble, and whether the children were naturally more thoughtful than the average, or whether they had special training on this point, or not, Tom's poor, shaken mind remained undisturbed by any inopportune words or hints. Isabel played her part wisely, but the strain was wearing on her more than I could bear to see. I worked and played with Tom, and watched him every hour of the day when he was not at school and safe under Isabel's care. We made short camping-trips to wooded districts near by to collect more specimens of this or that species already in his cases; we sat whole evenings in his re-fitted laboratory, classifying or labelling, as we had done when we were boys. One evening after school, he found a letter awaiting him from an English Zoölogical Society, asking him to go to California to collect for them some specimens of a certain rare species found near Marysville. The type specimen, they wrote, had been taken at the Sutter Buttes. Would he undertake to get them?

"He will go," said Isabel, as she told me of it, "and you will have to go with him; there is no other way, for the doctor says we must not oppose him in anything now."

No need to describe our journey; the time was filled with talk of genus and species, with Tanias, Spermophilus, and Pero—but not to particularize—with Tom's old enthusiasms about animals as specimens. He could hardly wait to attend properly to getting his camp and collecting-stuff together, after our arrival at Marysville, he was so eager to be at work.

I held him in leash until we were fully ready, and set off with the impatient naturalist toward his collection grounds.

We had worked together a week in our locust-grove camp, skinning and stuffing, labelling and listing, and Tom was as happy as if he were indeed only fifteen. So absorbed was he that it seemed safe to leave him hours at a time, as I now often did on searches of my own.

One day after we had finished packing a box of specimens and Tom had laid out a full day's work for himself, in which I could be of no use, and at a time when I had begun to feel secure in his condition as showing no sign of change, I decided to spend the day some six miles distant to take observations on a mirage visible frequently from the place where we were. When I returned at dusk I found Tom asleep under a locust-tree in the yard. I saw that he had finished only about half of the work he had planned for the day, so that he must have been sleeping some hours. As I moved about the camp fire-place preparing to get supper, at some inadvertent noise of mine he turned over, sat up slowly as if still sleepy, "Hello, old fellow," I called out as I flourished a frying pan, "if anybody wants hot flapjacks now —"

But I was stopped by his look of bewilderment. "What's this? I must be asleep; can't you wake me? Where are we? What day of the month is it?"

What could I say? There was but one way to deal with a man like Tom Fanshawe. I told him that he had been sick, and that things were not all right with him when the fever had left him, that he had wanted to come out here and that it was thought that the change would —

"But what does all this mean?" indicating the specimens.

"Oh, we've been trapping and hunting a bit, but let's have supper, and talk about things after."

I felt that all the wisdom of all the doctors could not have helped me here; there seemed to be nothing to do but wait. He would not eat,—said he wanted to think a bit, and sat with his head in his hands for more than an hour.

I went to bed under my own locust-tree, and lay watching him until, near midnight, he turned to his bed and soon fell asleep. I rose and sat by the fire until signs of morning, then slept an hour or two myself. When I awoke, Tom was busy about the fire, and said as soon as he saw me stirring, "I remember all that happened until the hour that mother —— you will have to tell me what came after; I know nothing."

Sparing all I could I told him all that had taken place, including the fact that he had thought himself but fifteen years old, and that he had in a sort realized the wish he had made on his way home six months ago—that he might go back to his boyhood. When I spoke of Isabel Droone, he was silent. I did not tell him that he had thought that she was his mother all those weeks. When I spoke of returning home he said, "not yet, not yet. Why should I ever go? What is there there for me but a grave?"

But I remembered the look on Isabel Droone's face when she bade us farewell, and resolved that not many days should go by, before she should see the man she loved come back from a far country and a strange peril.

A Girl's Problem

Food that Restores and Makes Health Possible.

The nervous strain of modern office work will undermine and break down the health unless Nerve and Brain cells are rebuilt daily by proper food.

There are stomach specialists as well as for eye, ear and other organs.

One of these told a young lady of New Brunswick, N. J., to quit medicines and eat Grape-Nuts. She says:

"For about 12 months I suffered severely with gastritis. I was unable to retain much of anything on my stomach, and consequently was compelled to give up my occupation. I took quantities of medicine, but I continued to suffer, and soon lost 15 pounds in weight. I was depressed in spirits and lost interest in everything generally. My mind was so affected that it was impossible to become interested in even the lightest reading matter.

"After suffering for months I decided to go to a stomach specialist. He put me on Grape-Nuts and my health began to improve immediately. It was the keynote of a new life. I found that I had been eating too much starchy food which I did not digest. I soon proved that it is not the quantity of food that one eats, but the quality.

"In a few weeks I was able to go back to my old business of doing clerical work. I have continued to eat Grape-Nuts for both the morning and evening meal. I wake in the morning with a clear mind and feel rested. I regained my lost weight in a short time. I am well and happy again and owe it to Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read "The Road to Wellville" in each package of Grape-Nuts.

REVERSIBLE
Linene
 Collars and Cuffs

Have You Worn Them?

Not "celluloid"—not "paper collars"—but made of fine cloth, exactly resemble fashionable linen goods and cost of dealers, for box of ten, 25 cents (2½ cents each).

No Washing or Ironing

When soiled discard. By mail 10 collars or 5 pairs, cuffs for 30 cents. Sample collar or pair cuffs for 6 cents in U. S. stamps. Give size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. O, Boston.

No Money Required until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone on
TEN DAYS FREE TRIAL
 Finest guaranteed 1905 Models $10 to $24 with Coaster-brakes & Punctureless Tires.
 1908 & 1904 Models $7 to $12
500 Second-Hand Wheels
 All makes & Models $3 to $8
 All good as new
GREAT FACTORY CLEARING SALE.
 RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town at good pay. Write for our catalog and Special Offer.
TIRES, SUNDRIES, AUTOMOBILES.
MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. T 111 CHICAGO

Send for this

Print your own cards, circulars, &c., Press 88. Small newspaper press $18 Money saver. Print for others, big profits. Typesetting easy, printed letters sent. Write to makers for catalog, presses, type, paper, &c. THE PRESS CO. MERIDEN, CONN.

CLASS PINS OR BADGES

For any College, School, Class Club, Society or Lodge.

Direct from Factory to Wearer.

We make to order Gold, Gold-Plated, Silver, Silver-Plated Pins, Buttons or Medals of all descriptions. Either of the two styles illustrated in one or two colors, enamel, any letters or figures if not more than shown.

Silver Plate, $1 doz. Sample, 10c
 Silver, $2.50 doz. Sample, 25c.

Free—Large Catalogue, illustrating hundreds of designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Colored Buttons and Ribbon Badges at low prices. Special designs and estimates free.

Basilian Bros. 21P, 6, Av, Rochester, N.Y.

WILLIAMS' SHAVING SOAP
 "The only Real Shaving Soap"
 Williams' Shaving Stick, Shaving Tablets, Toilet Water, Talcum Powder, Jersey Cream Toilet Soap, etc., sold everywhere.
 Write for booklet "How to Shave"
THE J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
 Glenshire, Conn.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DURY'S OZARK HERBS restores gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP. Is not sticky or dirty, contains no dangerous or irritating ingredients, coppers, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers, produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color it originally was before it turned gray. Full size package sent by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents.
OZARK HERB CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

DIVIDEND

PAYING MINING, OIL, TIMBER, SMELTER, AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS making possible LARGE INTEREST AND PROFITS, listed and unlisted, our specialty. Booklets giving full information mailed free on application.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,

Bankers & Brokers, 66 Broadway, New York

Work for Yourself

Not Others

Ambitious men and women, there is plenty money in the mail-order business, and it requires but little capital. Get started properly, conduct it right—it means independence and a large steady income. We teach this business completely. Send for free booklet.
Louis Guenther's Mail Order Bureau, 602 Schiller Bldg., Chicago

Be Your Own Boss!

MANY MAKE $2,000.00 A YEAR. You have the same chance. Start a Mail Order Business at home. We tell you how. Money coming in daily. Enormous profits. Everything furnished. Write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars.
B. C. KRUEGER CO., 155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

WOMEN TO SEW Shields at home.

Plain Sewing only, it's all piece work. Good pay; no material to buy. Send reply envelope for particulars and prices we pay.
Universal Co., Dept. 100, Phila., Pa.

Ladies

having fancywork to sell, Embroideries, Battenberg, and Drawwork also to order work, send stamped envelope.

LADIES' EXCHANGE, Dept. T, 24 Monroe Street, Chicago

Accident

Protection For Men and Women. $1000 Policy pays $5.00 a week with $100 Emergency Benefit.

Cost $7.50 a year. Handsome black seal wallet given free with each policy. Good salaried earning $150 a week. Excellent day lines. Write to-day for renewal contract with liberal conditions.
GERMAN REGISTRY CO., 652 Holland Bldg., St. Louis.

DIAMONDS

ON CREDIT

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

LOFTIS
1905
CATALOGUE
1000
DIAMOND
ILLUSTRATIONS

EVERY WOMAN LOVES A DIAMOND SAVE A DIAMOND—WIN A HEART

The passionate feminine wish is for Diamonds. When a woman is truly beautiful she wears Diamonds. With Diamonds she becomes doubly attractive. Diamonds enhance the charms of all women. Sweetheart, wife, daughter and mother eagerly desire fiery, flashing aristocratic gems. And woman's intuition is right. The scintillating jewels make her beautiful, aid her in achieving social triumphs, and, in necessity are her instantaneous asset—her savings bank. A wise woman knows she can get prompt cash for her Diamonds—wherever she may be—in any part of the world. Write for Catalogue. Write Today.

Write for a Catalogue The Loftis Catalogue is free. Write at once for a free copy of our luxurious and beautiful catalogue containing 1,000 illustrations of Diamonds, Watches and Jewels—66 pages of valuable information explaining our popular system in every detail, giving lowest quotations. We also send free to all applicants a unique and interesting Diamond Souvenir Booklet. Write at once and we will send you both Catalogue and Booklet free, to your great pleasure and advantage.

The Loftis System of Diamonds on Credit, which won the Gold Medal at the St. Louis Exposition, is easy and confidential, enabling far-away buyers to select the finest Diamonds, Watches and Jewelry. The article is sent on approval to your home, place of business or express office as preferred, so you can examine it, being free to buy or not, as you please. We deliver anywhere in the United States, paying all charges, taking all risks.

Our Credit Offer All honest people—employer or employee—can open a confidential account with us. One-fifth the price to be paid on delivery—you retain the article—pay balance when you please. You will not miss the small monthly payments from your income. Save a Diamond. Better than a Savings Bank. Diamonds are predicted to increase in value 50 per cent during the present year. Write for Catalogue—1000 Illustrations.

Our Cash Terms You select your Diamond. You pay cash for it. We give you a written guarantee that you can return the Diamond any time within one year, and we will pay you all you paid for it less 10 per cent. You can thus wear a $50.00 Diamond Ring or Earrings for one year—return it to us—get your $45—which is less than 10 cents per week for one year.

Guarantee With each Diamond we give a written guarantee of quality and value signed by a member of our firm. Write for Catalogue—66 pages.

Write at Once to us for Catalogue of Diamonds, Watches and Jewelry and you will obtain every advantage by doing business with the Diamond Headquarters. Write for Catalogue.

LOFTIS
BROS & CO. 1833

DIAMOND CUTTERS
Mfg. Jewelers and Opticians.

DEPT. E 52.
92 to 98 State St.
CHICAGO.

Copyright, 1905, Franklin Agency, Chicago

ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE

Shake Into Your Shoes

"In a pinch, use Allen's Foot-Ease."

Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder for the feet. It cures painful, swollen, smarting, nervous feet, and instantly takes the sting out of corns and bunions.

It's the greatest comfort discovery of the age. Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight-fitting or new shoes feel easy. It is a certain cure for ingrowing nails, sweating, callous and hot, tired, aching feet. We have over 30,000 testimonials. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25c. Do not accept any substitute. Sent by mail for 25c. in stamps.

FREE TRIAL PACKAGE sent by mail.

MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS, the best medicine for Feverish, Sickly Children. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Trial Package FREE. Address, ALLEN S. OLINSTEAD, Le Roy, N. Y.

[Mention this paper.]

STRAIGHT LEGS

If yours are not so, our method will positively make them appear straight, trim and stylish. No inconvenience, no exposure. "Restores to the full natural appearance of the strong and well trained leg."—Health Culture. "So simple you wonder someone didn't think of it before."—Bulletin of Pharmacy.

"Correct appearance of the leg restored; not the least discomfort."—Medical Talk. Endorsed and used by men of fashion everywhere. Write for photo-illustrated book, testimonials and measurement blank, sent entirely free under plain letter seal.

THE ALISON CO. Desk C4, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Powder's in the Puff—35c

It sits through a fine soft eiderdown cushion, and is so evenly and perfectly applied, that milady's skin is given a silken beauty possible only with the

SACHET TALCUM PUFF

This Puff is having a tremendous sale all over the world, particularly in Paris. The powder is the purest and best on the market, and the puff is supplied with enough to outlast three times that required when applied in the old ordinary way. Each puff made of art chamouis exquisitely decorated in hand painting. Sent postpaid on receipt of 35c. Agents wanted.

THE BELVO COMPANY, WELFLEET, MASS.

$10 DRESSES ANY MAN From Head to Foot FREE SAMPLES AND MEASURES

BEST BLANKS
We make an up-to-date suit strictly to your measure in latest English Sack Style for only $10 and give the following complete outfit FREE and you don't pay for it until you receive the suit and Free Outfit, and find it just as represented. Send us your P. O. Address and we will send you FREE SAMPLES of cloth, tape measure, and measurement blanks, for size of Suit, Shoes, Hat, etc., FREE. A Suit of Clothes Made to Measure from any of the samples sent you, for which tailor would ask from $25.00 to $35.00

A Dunlap Block any shape Hat $2.50
A pair Stylish Lace or Congress Shoes $2.50
A neat Percale Shirt . . . 1.25
A neat four-in-hand Bow or Full Tie50
A pair of good web Suspenders50
A Jap Handkerchief50
A pair extra quality Lisle Thread Socks .50

Many Dealers ask for this Outfit $20.00

Send no Money, but write at once for Free samples and also our Special Premium offer.

Address CHICAGO SFG. & MFG. CO.

Dept. 106, 51-53-55 Washington St., Chicago

Ref.: Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank.

Capital $750,000, or any Express Co. in Chicago

To Story Writers

While at present
The Black Cat particularly desires very short and very clever stories, it will consider for purchase any tales not exceeding five thousand words, provided they are fascinating stories from beginning to end.

THE EQUITABLE

HENRY B. HYDE
1905-6

J. WALKER-SMITH
1903-4

J. B. HYDE
1904-5

TIME AND TIDE WAIT FOR NO MAN

Every tick of the clock brings you nearer the unproductive years of your life.

At the flood-tide of your life make provision for your mature years.

An Endowment Policy in the Equitable will return your surplus earnings when you need them most — and meanwhile your loved ones are protected.

Splendid opportunities for men of character to act as representatives.

Write to CARE E. TAYLOR, 227 Vice President

Send this coupon for particulars or write

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES

120 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Please send me information regarding an Endowment for $ issued to a man years of age

Name.....

Address

An Art Education

$1.00

"How to Illustrate"

A Self-Instructing Book

It teaches thoroughly Drawing and Illustrating in all its branches. Price, postpaid, cloth, $1.50; paper, $1.00. Or will send 16 page descriptive booklet on request. BROWN PUBLISHING CO. Room 928, 114 Fifth Ave., New York

LOCKE ADDER

$5.00 $10.00
New Improved
 an Adding Machine!
 Rapid, Simple, Handy, Practical, Durable.
 Capacity, 999,999,999
 Includes Free Addenda Manual
C. E. LOCKE MFG. CO.
 251 Walnut Street, Iowa

STAMMERING Cured at Home

by correspondence. Send for special rates and full particulars.
E. S. INSTITUTE, 470P Bergen Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Royalty Paid and Musical Compositions.
On Song Poems We arrange and popularize.
E. L. F. Pub. Co., 98 Walnut St.,
Dept. D. Chicago, Ill.

WRITE A SONG And Make a FORTUNE!
 We compose music to your words.
GROOM MUSIC CO.
 4 STEINWAY HALL, CHICAGO

ROYALTY PAID and Musical Compositions. We arrange and popularize.
PIONEER MUSIC PUB. CO., (Inc.)
362 Manhattan Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

STORIES, POEMS, ESSAYS

Edited, Revised, Copied and Sold by experienced hands.
L. H. Johnson, Mgr., Room 412, 126 5th Ave., New York, N. Y.

MSS. Criticized, corrected and sold on commission. Special demand for good SHORT STORIES.
 What have you to offer?
Furman Press League, 626 Whitney Bldg., Springfield, Mass.

IN SIX WEEKS

BE MY PARTNER

The Correspondence school, with an international reputation—The Correspondence Institute of America—was founded and originated by me. My first investment was $1.37—the amount started the school. I decided to take in partners—the cash capital was then increased to just $50.00. Under my direction the school grew rapidly. In one year over a hundred thousand dollars was taken in through the United States mails. I made money from this investment—so did my associates. Large dividends were paid. I believe I can do it again.

I am now interested in another enterprise. Its prospects are bright—large profits are both possible and probable. I am encouraged. It is my intention to develop this new undertaking as rapidly as possible. I am looking for partners—co-operators. I believe I have a proposition that will interest the man or woman who has a little money to invest. Become a stockholder in my latest enterprise. Write me for full information—If you want quick action send me your remittance to-day. My business experience and reputation will satisfy you regarding my reliability. I believe I can make money for you. I am not promoting oil wells, gold mines or enterprises of a similar nature. I want to tell you about an established business. Send me your name and address and I will mail you the whole story.
ALY. F. CLARK, Suite 6, 87 Nassau St., New York.

WRITERS We want Novels, Short Stories, Poems, interesting photographs, anything of interest to the reading public. ARTISTS to illustrate stories, jokes, etc. Write a letter telling what you can do.
Burrell Syndicate, World Bldg., N. Y. City

Song Poems Wanted
ONE SUCCESS MEANS A FORTUNE. We write the music and submit the songs to the New York Music Publishers. MILLER MUSIC COMPANY, St. James Building, New York.

Royalty Paid on SONG-POEMS
 We write music and publish songs.
MELVILLE MUSIC PUB. CO., 1125 Broadway, New York

VENTRILOQUISM

Learned by anyone at home. Small cost. Send 2-cent stamp for particulars and proof.
G. A. SMITH, Box N, 2040 Knoxville Ave., PEORIA, ILL.

PARROTS

Until August 25th, 1906. ONLY, Finest Double, Yellow-Head Parrots, perfectly tame, can be safely handled and petted. GUARANTEED to make best talkers, singers and whistlers, $5. Sent safely anywhere. Other Double, Yellow-Head Parrots, not so tame, GUARANTEED to talk, only $2. Cuban Parrots, smaller, can be safely handled and petted, guaranteed to make good talkers, $2. Our tame parrots make best and most affectionate pets. Angora Cats, $10 each. Monkeys, $15.

EXCHANGE, 25 Third Ave., NEW YORK

The Editor To You Who Write The Editor

This little chat is for writers. If you write, or if you have an itching to write, we want to talk to you. We know some things about writing that may interest you, and we shall try to put them in such a chatty form that you will forget you are reading an advertisement until we break in solemnly and ask, "Good morning! Have you subscribed for THE EDITOR?"

Lots of authors have. Not so many years ago we entered a subscription from a man out in California. We had never seen his name in the magazines, but we had faith in him, as we have in all honest workers. One day we found a story of his in a magazine, and presently another, and another, till we came to look for them regularly. We were immensely pleased at his success, and down in one corner of our heart we were egotistically certain that our magazine had been one of its factors. We never dared voice our belief, it is true, but we cherished it for our own satisfaction. One morning, in our mail, we found a letter from him. "When I subscribed," he wrote, "I had a goodly file of my manuscripts laid away. Through your help I have disposed of the major portion." It was signed in that great scrawling hand so many editors know — "Jack London."

If you want to follow the trail blazed by Mr. London, you should go about it by studying the profession. We pride ourselves on the fact that THE EDITOR is a pretty good, live text-book. It is a mighty poor sort of a teacher, you know, who never sees an educational journal; new methods and systems are cropping out constantly. No doctor dares get behind in his profession. And no writer — we leave this to you — likes to send a manuscript to a magazine that suspended a few months ago; nor allow an article to go unrec'd that may cover just the peg on which his or her rejections cling. The writer wants hints, helps, — as many of them as possible; everybody does. Just at this moment we cannot recall a magazine that better meets this want than THE EDITOR.

How to Judge Literary Bureaus

When you get a glittering prospectus from a company that promises to make you an author of world-wide reputation, ask yourself these questions:

1. Have the men who form the bureau ever written anything themselves?

2. Have they had years of experience in the work of criticizing and revising?

3. Have they ever accomplished anything?

4. Has the bureau any standing among editors and publishers?

Now, after you have drawn the blue pencil through the glittering generalities of their statements, study our reasons for believing we are warranted in expecting and deserving your patronage.

5. Not an editor in our employ is an editor alone; every man has written and published his own stories in high-class magazines; every man has published his own books through the best houses in America.

6. THE EDITOR LITERARY BUREAU has been before the public for over ten years. During the

THE EDITOR

A Journal of Information for Writers

IT PUBLISHES:

Contributions of prominent authors

Articles on story writing

Articles on essay writing

Articles on versification

Articles on marketing manuscripts

Hints on preparing manuscripts

Notes from editors stating needs

Notices of all new publications

Notices of all suspended publications

Notices of all timely editorial needs

Lists of magazines that want manuscripts

Complete monthly report on literary market

Answers to literary queries, departments, etc.

Also conducts literary bureau under direct supervision of Leslie W. Quirk, to which is offered expert criticism on manuscripts, advice as to strengthening, correcting, revising, mastery of technique, etc., together with a list of magazine, syndicate, or newspaper markets for which each is best adapted. Established 1895.

whole period of its existence it has handled more work than any other, and has passed upon matter that later appeared in the very best magazines and between the covers of the books of the very best publishing houses.

3. It has placed books with publishers as an example we cite "Stringtown on the Pike," by John Uri Lloyd, which was one of the most popular stories of the day. It has secured words of approval for its services from the very best writers in America — note Jack London, etc. Through its advice thousands of stories have been placed with the best magazines.

4. The editors of the leading magazines recommend THE EDITOR LITERARY BUREAU. Although not at liberty to mention names, we can convince any doubting patron. One publication that has not asked us to refrain from mentioning it is Munsey's, which has directed more than one writer to us during the past few months.

We invite comparisons on this basis with any other company in this country doing work of this nature.

AN OFFER of FREE CRITICISM

You are interested in writing, else you would not have read to this point.

THE EDITOR is the best journal of information for literary workers that is published, else it would not be read by more writers than all the similar publications in the world put together.

Susan Keating Glaspell, one of the cardinal prize winners in The Black Cat contest, says: "I study THE EDITOR carefully every month; any one who attempts to write short stories would be very short-sighted to try to get along without it." It is interesting to note, too, that the three capital prize winners of this contest, and a very large majority of all others whose stories were awarded prizes, are EDITOR subscribers.

Isn't it worth a dollar a year just to have the very latest, the most intimate information about prize contests? Isn't it worth that much to have a monthly report on all the papers, syndicates and magazines that purchase manuscripts? Isn't it worth that much to read a half dozen or more articles each month on essay and poem and story writing, and on essay and poem and story selling, to say nothing of the clever verse, the answers to any literary questions you may care to ask, and the editorial inspiration?

You don't need to answer these questions; we know the answers.

We are going to invite you to join us, and if you refuse you can go off in a corner and sulk by yourself while your literary friends read THE EDITOR and get into print. We think this invitation will put you on our books, however, for it is simply this: Send us one dollar for a full year's subscription, and with it — not afterwards, mind you! — one manuscript of less than 2,000 words, and we will give the frankest, bluntest, most helpful criticism you ever read, and tell you what magazines will be most apt to buy your offering. This service, at the regular rates of our Literary Bureau, would ordinarily cost you one dollar by itself. If your manuscript exceeds 2,000 words, and is under 5,000, add fifty cents to your remittance. The offer is to new subscribers only. If you are already a subscriber, send us your friend's subscription and your manuscript, or mail our offer to some writer who needs us.

There is just one condition — you must clip and return this invitation, and you must send in your dollar and your manuscript before June 15th. Well?

The Editor EDITOR PUB. CO. 150 Nassau Street New York City The Editor

A National Institution.

President Roosevelt, in his message opening Congress in December, pointed out that the business of insurance had attained national proportions, and his words will be remembered by those who read and examine the Annual Statement for the year 1904 of The Prudential Insurance Company.

This Company wrote and issued during 1904 over $312,000,000 of paid-for life insurance, increasing the number of policies in force to nearly six millions, and bringing the amount of insurance in force to a sum exceeding one billion dollars.

This Company, whose agencies extend to every State in the Union, is a truly national institution, not only in size, but in the position which it occupies as the trustee for the funds of the millions in all parts of the country, thus furnishing the means of making provision for the future for themselves and their dependents.

That this trust is well placed is shown by the fact that the Company has accumulated assets of over $88,000,000, and a surplus exceeding $13,000,000, the liabilities being $75,000,000. The exhibit this year gives a very plain and convincing statement of the character of these assets and of the security which is afforded on its loans, on bonds and mortgages, and collateral securities.

One very interesting item of the statement is the amount paid to its policy holders. Over $13,000,000 were paid to policy holders during 1904. The company has paid to policy holders to date a total of over $92,000,000. It is certainly impossible to estimate the amount of good which the distribution of this vast sum of money has accomplished for the American people who have been its recipients.

The Company has at different times made changes and concessions in its policies, which resulted in giving additional benefits to those insured. Whenever practicable these concessions are made retroactive; and up to the present time the Company has distributed in cash dividends and other concessions, not stipulated in original contracts and voluntarily given to holders of old policies, over five million dollars.

The Company will furnish any information concerning its policies to those who write to the Home Office.

Address THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO., Newark, N. J.

WE PAID

$ 28

FOR A CENT

You may have equally valuable coins. Get posted. Don't let a fortune slip through your fingers. Our 1905 Huh Coin Book (just issued) gives full information on Canadian, Foreign, Oriental, Ancient, as well as U. S. Coins and Paper Money, Encased Postage Stamps, Coats of Arms, etc., with big prices we guarantee to pay for them. Some as high as $500.00 each. It is a handsome, cloth-bound volume of over 150 pages, containing 1000 illustrations. A book worth $1.50 sent for only 25 cents. An illustrated paper on coins mailed for two stamps.

ALEXANDER & COMPANY

214C, Washington St., Boston, Mass. (Established 1873.)

Prize Story Treat

We will mail at back numbers of THE BLACK CAT containing 108 stories, including many that won from $100 to $1,000 each—for 50 cents.

As THE BLACK CAT is devoted entirely to short stories, back numbers are as up to date as the current issue.

THE SHORTSTORY PUBLISHING CO., - BOSTON, MASS.

Hotel Belleclaire

Broadway and 77th Street,
New York.

Seventh Avenue,
Amsterdam Ave.
and West 130th St.
Cars pass the door.

Luxurious rooms for permanent and transient guests.

Restaurant
a Feature.
Exquisite
Palm Room.
Art Nouveau
Cafe.

Royal Hungarian Orchestra.

"Most Artistically Beautiful Hotel in the World." Can offer few single rooms, with bath, beautifully furnished, suitable for two people, $60 per month.

TRANSIENT RATES:

One Room, with bath.....$2.50 per day
Parlor, Bedroom, with bath, $3 and $5 per day
Parlor, 2 Bedrooms, with bath, $5 and $7 per day Every improvement known to modern inn-genially.

Write for our magazine, "The Hotel Belleclaire World."

MILTON ROBLEE, Proprietor.

A Stream of Gold

Is constantly flowing from our mines to the pockets of nearly 10,000 of our clients. It amounted to nearly $450,000 in 1904; it should amount to $250,000 in 1905. It is the result of our work of operating, developed, proven, equipped, dividend-paying gold mines and oil properties of the very highest class, on a safe, sound and wonderfully successful system that positively guarantees immense profits and makes a loss impossible. Our system completely eliminates the risks of ordinary mining and enables investors to share in the enormous dividends of the most profitable industries in the world, while enjoying the safety of a government bond. If YOU want to make money write to-day for full particulars, including six months' free subscription to our illustrated mining paper.

A. L. WISNER & CO., Bankers
32 Broadway
New York

IT PAYS BIG TO MAKE THE PUBLIC WITH MOTION PICTURES

HUMOROUS AND OTHER VIEWS, TO EXPERIENCE CEN-CEBARY as our instruction Book and "Business Guide" tell all. We furnish Complete Outfits with Big Advertising Posters, etc. Humorous dramas brimful of fun, Travel, History, Religion, Temperance work and songs illustrated. One man can do it. ASTONISHING OPPORTUNITY in any locality for a man with a little money to show in churches, school houses, lodge halls, theatres, etc. Price $10 to over $100 per night. Others do it. Why not you? It's easy; write to us and we'll tell you how. Catalogue free.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.,
454 Chemical Bank Bldg., CHICAGO, U. S. A.

BARODA DIAMONDS.

....JUST DISCOVERED....
Brilliant as the gem itself, exhibiting the most stand acid test, and FEELS EXPERTS, SOLID GOLD SOFTENING; thorough examination allowed before payable. Write for catalogue and special terms, etc. Agents wanted.
THE BARODA CO. Dept. 59
71 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

RUPTURE CURED while you work.
You pay $4.00 when cured. No cure, no pay.
ALEX SPEIRS, Box 218, WESTBROOK, ME.

PROTECTS INVESTORS The Financial World SAMPLE COPY FREE

NO INVESTOR OR SPECULATOR CAN BE WITHOUT this fearless financial paper and its Advice Service. It helps you to judge legitimate investments from fakes. It exposes rotten Rasques with all its tricks and traps. It is independent as it accepts no advertising but lives and prospers by subscriptions only. It will to judge safely any Railroad, Oil, Plantation, Mining, Industrial Stock or Bond, in which you may be interested. A sample copy might save you a fortune or make you one. Send now for Free Sample Copy before you forget it.

OPEN YOUR EYES

FINANCIAL WORLD
146 Schiller Bldg., Chicago

"HOW MONEY GROWS"

is the title of a book which tells how to invest small sums ($10 or more per month), how to tell a good investment, how you can convert $100 into $5000, how to choose between real estate and stocks, how savings banks make their money, how to choose your partners, how to guard against uncertain "prospects," how to protect yourself in case you should not care to hold an investment indefinitely, etc. This book is not an advertisement of any particular investment. It is a general "talk" about investments, based upon my experience and observations. Write me a postal saying, simply, "Send How Money Grows." You will receive the book, free, by return mail.

W. M. OSTRANDER,

Investment Department,
132 North American Building
Philadelphia.

You Can't Lose Your Umbrella THE REMEMBER-ME UMBRELLA RIB RETAINER AND CARRIER

A clip, handsomely nickeled and engraved, holds ribs together; has two tongues to enable you to hang umbrella from your coat pocket or hat rack; removed from umbrella and attached to your clothing serves as a reminder when you are ready to go.

Sent postpaid for 10 cents.

Mail Order Men and Dealers send for circulars and special terms.

ATLANTIC SPECIALTY MANFG. CO.
Dept. B, 700 Broadway, Camden, N. J.

Cook's Malto-Rice

A Pure, Ready-to-eat Rice, Malted

RICE contains more nutriment and supplies more energy to the human body than anything that grows out of the ground, and is the easiest food to digest.

MALT as a marvelously beneficial stimulant and tonic, man had known for centuries, but only yesterday did he learn to combine it to the greatest advantage with his food.

COOK'S MALTO-RICE IS A PERFECT BLENDING OF MALT AND RICE.

Thoroughly cooked, ready to serve from package to dish.

EVERY PACKAGE OF MALTO-RICE IS STERILIZED.

It's pure, free from "lumps," germs, and will keep.

Ask your grocer to-day for a package of

COOK'S MALTO-RICE

15 Cents

THE FOUR-TRACK NEWS

The Great Illustrated Magazine of Travel and Education

150 OR MORE PAGES MONTHLY.

Its scope and character are indicated by the following titles of articles that have appeared in recent issues; all profusely illustrated:

Eleven Hours of Afternoon	Cy Warran
The Americanization of Paris	Alexander Hume Ford
Summer in Winter	Miss J. Savage
Where Blue Met Grey—Poem	Thomas C. Harbaugh
Some Animal Models	Julia R. Cowles
Where Every Prospect Pleases	Kirk Munroe
New England Witchcraft	M. Inlay Taylor
Time Defying Tangles	Allen Day
New York From An Air Ship	Bertha Smith
A King on American Soil	T. D. MacGregor
New Zealand	T. E. Dwyer
The Limited Express—Poem	Nixon Waterman
Test-life	Bir Edwin Arnold
The Nub End of Canada	Frank Yeigh
Coral and Lasso	Winnie J. Reynolds
Santo Domingo	Frederick A. Ober

SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS, or $1.00 A YEAR.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES $1.50.

Can be obtained of Newsdealers, or by addressing

GEORGE H. DANIELS, Publisher,

Room 44, 7 East 42d Street, New York

10 Cents a Year

FINELY ILLUSTRATED
ON BOOK PAPER

Wilshire's Magazine

125 East 23d Street

NEW YORK

Salesmen Wanted

to sell CHICAGO Typewriters and supplies in all unoccupied territory. If you can sell $100 machines for $35, write us and we will start you in a permanent and very profitable business. The CHICAGO has many points of superiority over any other machine, but sells at its right price $35.00—one-third the true bolstered price of the so-called "Standard" machines. Catalogue and full information free.

The CHICAGO WRITING MACHINE CO.
104 Wendell Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Copyright, 1904, John Mackintosh, New York.

MACKINTOSH'S TOFFEE the Pure and Delicious OLD ENGLISH CANDY

The enormous sales of my Toffee in this country and in England (the house of Mackintosh's Toffee) have made it the great international candy. It is absolutely pure and wholesome, and the best candy ever made for children. I want to caution you against inferior imitation of my Toffee. Be sure that you get the original "Mackintosh's Toffee." Ask your dealer, and if he cannot supply you a 2d or 4th Family Tin, stamps for a sample package; or $1.50 for a 4th Family Tin. Try your dealer first.

JOHN MACKINTOSH,
Dept. 24 78 Hudson St., New York

IF YOU ARE GOOD AT SOLVING PUZZLES
TRY
RYDE
THE EDUCATIONAL
AND SCIENTIFIC WONDER

"Ryde Puzzle"

A phenomenal piece of mechanism made of sheet steel. It can be used as a key ring or fob chain. Get them direct from the manufacturer. Sample by mail, 20c.

The Ryde Specialty Works
191 W. Main Street Rochester, N. Y.

MAKE YOURSELF TALLER

Gilbert's Heel Cushions

"Worn inside the shoe."

Increase Height, Arch the Instep,

Make Better

Fitting Shoes, Remove Jar in Walking. Indorsed by physicians. Simply placed in the heel, felt down. Don't require larger shoes. 4 in., 25c.; 4 1/2 in., 35c.; 5 in., 50c. per pair. A shoe and dep't READ Send name, size shoe, height desired, and oc. stamp for pair on 10 days' trial.

GILBERT MFG. CO., 40 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

HOTEL TOURAINÉ

Delaware Ave. & Johnson Park

BUFFALO, N. Y.

A modern, high-class and convenient stopping place, offering every accommodation for the comfort and pleasure of transient guests. Moderate prices.

Harry C. Griswold, Proprietor.

You Can Earn from $3000 to $5000
A YEAR in the REAL ESTATE BUSINESS.

We teach you thoroughly by mail and fit you to successfully establish your own real estate business; list with you choice salable properties and investments; help you secure customers; co-operate with you and assist you to a quick success. Do not spend the best days of your life working for others, when you can make an independent fortune for yourself.

Real Estate offers better opportunities than any other business to men without capital. We also teach you General Brokerage and Insurance Business.

One of our correspondents writes: "I have received more real good from your method the past few days than from contact with a real estate agent for three years." Another writes: Too much cannot be said in praise of your institution. Hundreds of others make similar statements. Write for particulars and Free Booklet. It will interest you.

Be A Business Man

H. W. CROSS & CO.
965 Tacoma Building
CHICAGO

Be Your Own Boss

3 Months Free

If you are interested in any kind of investment, Oil, Mining, Plantation, Industrial, Lands, Stocks, Bonds, Mortgages, etc., send us your name and address and we will send you The Investor's Review, for three months free of charge. A journal of advice for investors. Gives latest and most reliable information concerning new enterprises. Knowledge is power. Great opportunities come and go. Great fakes likewise. Get posted before investing. Write to-day.

Investor's Review, 1408 Gaff Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

INVESTORS

desiring to realize the Large Interest and Profits possible in legitimate Mining, Oil, Timber & Smelter Investments and Dividend-paying Industrial Stocks, listed and unlisted, should send for our Booklets, giving full information, mailed free.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,
Bankers & Brokers, 66 Broadway, New York

LADIES

to do piece work at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $15 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO.
Desk B. C. 34 Monroe St., Chicago, Ills.

Make $5,000 A Year

Many of our representatives are doing it. We want first-class local agents in every city and town to sell our high grade guaranteed dividend paying mining and oil securities on commission. We are the leading firm in our line in America and are operating only developed, paying properties on a new and successful system that absolutely insures satisfactory and profitable results. The right man can quickly build up a large permanent, profitable business. References required.

A. L. Wisner & Co., Bankers, 32 Broadway, New York

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

PERMANENTLY REMOVED

By My Scientific Treatment Especially Prepared for Each Individual Case.

I suffered for years with a humiliating growth of hair on my face, and tried many remedies without success; but I ultimately discovered the True Secret for the permanent removal of hair, and for more than seven years have been deriving happiness to, and gaining thanks of, thousands of ladies.

I assert and Will Prove to You, that my treatment will destroy the follicle and otherwise Permanently Remove the Hair Forever. No trace is left on the skin after using, and the treatment can be applied privately by yourself in your own chamber.

IF YOU ARE TROUBLED, WRITE TO ME for further information, and I will convince you of all I claim. I will give prompt personal and Strictly Confidential attention to your letter. Being a woman, I know of the delicacy of such a matter as this, and act accordingly. Address, HELEN DOUGLAS, 196 Douglas Building, 35 West 21st St., NEW YORK CITY.

My PU-RE-CO SOAP and CREAM removes and prevents wrinkles and preserves the skin. May be had at all the best druggists or direct from me. PU-RE-CO CREAM,50c. and $1.00 a jar. PU-RE-CO SOAP, a Box of Three Cakes,50c.

Fat People

I Can Reduce Your Weight 8 to 15 Pounds a Week With Out Any Radical Change In What You Eat; no nauseating drugs, no tight bandages nor sickening cathartics. I am a Regular Practising Physician, Making a Specialty of the Reduction of Superfluous Flesh; and after you have taken my treatment a few weeks, you will say: "I never felt better in my life."

Safe, Prompt and Certain

By my new, original scientific treatment your weight will be reduced without causing wrinkles or babbiness of skin. Heavy abdomen, DOUBLE OR UNDER CHIN or other disagreeable evidences of Obesity will disappear. Your form will acquire symmetry as the bulk of fat is removed; complexion will be cleared. Crookedness of heart, kidneys, stomach or other vitia-organs will be remedied; and you will be delightfully astonished at the promptness and ease with which these results are accomplished under my system.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Call on me personally, or write, addressing Department as given below, for my new book on "Obesity—its Cause and Cure." It is interesting, convincing and instructive. It will be sent you free and prepaid; don't send any money. Confidential correspondence invited from all, especially physicians. Address plainly and confidentially.

UNITED STATES MEDICAL DISPENSARY,
24 East 23rd St., Dept. 198 New York City, N. Y.

Mullins Stamped Steel Boats Can't Sink

Staunchly built of strong, rigid steel plates with air chambers in each end like a life boat, they are buoyant—strong—safe—speedy—as much better than a wooden boat as a steel greyhound is better than a wooden schooner. They don't leak—crack—dry out—wear out or become waterlogged and can't sink because of the air chambers.

Motor Boats, Row Boats, Hunting and Fishing Boats

Mullins Steel Motor Boats are elegantly equipped, full-fledged, torpedo stern motor boats—not row boats with motors in them. They are breaking all records.

Motor Boats, 16 ft. 1½ h.p. $135; 18 ft. 3 h.p. $240. Row Boats $20 up
All boats are sold direct and every boat is fully guaranteed. Prompt deliveries.

Send for 1905 Catalogue

The W. H. Mullins Co., (The Steel Boat Builders) 148 Franklin St., Salem, Ohio
Member National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

16-foot Torpedo Stern Motor Boat, 1½ h.p. Price, $135

$1000

FOR SHORT STORIES.

The American Household has just started a short-story contest. The first prize will be $500 and the next five $100 each. Every story available will be paid for at regular rates. We are in the market for an unlimited number of short stories. The subscription price of the Household is but 25 cents a year.

THE AMERICAN HOUSEHOLD, DEPT. 30, 21-23 EAST TWENTY-FIRST STREET, NEW YORK CITY

16 FOOT LAUNCH COMPLETE WITH ENGINE $96

WE ARE THE LARGEST BUILDERS OF BOATS & LAUNCHES IN THE WORLD
SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOG
ALL BOATS FITTED WITH WATER TIGHT COMPARTMENTS CAN NOT SINK
WE CARRY A FULL LINE OF BOATS READY TO SHIP
MICHIGAN STEEL BOAT CO. 1408 JEFFERSON AVE DETROIT MICH

The Up-to-Date Bicycle

The 1905 model bicycles, with coaster-brakes and puncture-proof tires, would have been considered miracles of mechanical achievement only a few decades ago, and yet they can be bought to-day for only a fraction of the prices then prevailing. We are offering the finest of this year's models at from $10 to $24, and the models of 1903 and 1904 at from $7 to $12. Our factory clearing sale is attracting much attention among wheelmen, and our special catalogue, which we mail free, is worthy of careful study.

THE MEAD CYCLE CO.

CHICAGO, - - - ILLINOIS

Take Your Pants Off

We Will Make You a $5.00 Pair Free.

FREE

Have your new suit made by the best tailors in the United States. "WE ARE."

We make to order from strictly all wool cloths for only $10 the latest style suits, tailored and finished equal TO THE BEST.

Our $10 suits lead the fashions—they are up-to-date—and guaranteed six months solid wear, or YOUR MONEY BACK.

Write for our samples at once—we will accept your first order without ONE CENT DEPOSIT, you pay for suit only after thorough examination and without obligation, to accept unless a perfect fit and just as claimed and equal TO ANY $25.00 SUIT. A pair of fine all-wool cambrerie $5 pants, also a fancy dress vest, also a beautiful leather headed patent suit, case all FREE with every suit.

On request will send free samples of cloth for suit, extra pants and free vest, also illustration of patent suit case, fashion plate, measurement blanks, tape and full instructions. We dress you in style for everyday, Sunday and party day, all for only $10. Address FOR THE ROYAL SUITFITTERS 519-521 Van Buren St., Chicago. References, This Paper, all Banks & Express Companies

ALL FOR $3.00

THE COSMOPOLITAN for 1905 desires to secure an additional hundred thousand business men, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, managers, etc.—men composing the brains of the country.

For this purpose half a million copies are being printed of a Five-Volume Encyclopedia, such as is ordinarily bought for ten or fifteen dollars; cloth bound, gold lettered; containing 6,000 "Who's Who", 65,000 Subjects, and 96 colored maps.

This is offered at ONE DOLLAR, if accompanied at the same time with a year's subscription to THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, One Dollar; and the new periodical, THE TWENTIETH CENTURY HOME, One Dollar; Three Dollars in all. It is an exceptional offer. A better one can never be made. It is doubtful if any publishing house can ever equal it. A large book-bindery plant was put in especially to bring the cost of this down to its lowest possible terms.

Express charges are paid by the receiver. The photograph shows these Volumes. Address

The Cosmopolitan Publishing House
Irvington, N. Y.

MENNEN'S
BORATED TALCUM
TOILET POWDER

Beautifies and Preserves the Complexion.

A Positive Relief for Prickly Heat, Chafing and Sunburn.

Mennen's does on every box, be sure that you get the original. Sold everywhere, or by mail 15 cents. Sample free. Gerhard Mennen Co., Newark, N. J. TRY MENNEN'S VIOLET TALCUM.

HERE IS A LIST OF GOOD POSITIONS WHICH DO YOU WANT?

Study the list. Mark the position you desire and mail the coupon to us. We will do the rest by showing you how you can in your spare time, without neglecting your present work, qualify yourself to enter the occupation of your choice, at a salary you could not command in years of ordinary work.

We will give you as evidence the names and addresses of thousands who have doubled, tripled and quadrupled their income as the result of marking this coupon.

We will make the way so plain to you that you will marvel at the ease with which it can be followed.

For this information, valuable as it is to you, we simply ask you to

MAIL THIS COUPON TO-DAY

International Correspondence Schools
Box 584, SCRANTON, PA.

Please explain, without further obligation on my part how I can qualify for a larger salary in the position before which I have marked X

Bookkeeper	Telephone Engineer
stenographer	Elec. Lighting Supt.
Advertisement Writer	Mech. Engineer
Show Card Writer	Surveyor
Window Trimmer	Stationary Engineer
Reefer's Draughtsman	Civil Engineer
Ornamental Designer	Builder Contractor
Illustrator	Architect Draughtsman
Civil Service	Architect
Chemist	Structural Engineer
Textile Mill Supt.	Bridge Engineer
Electrician	Foreman Plumber
Elec. Engineer	Marine Engineer

Name _____

Street and No. _____

City _____ State _____

QUILTED MATTRESS PADS

THREE SCORE and TEN YEARS is a long life, yet about THIRTY YEARS of it is spent in bed. Then why not make your bed as comfortable as it can be made.

Quilted Mattress Pads will not only make it comfortable, but as they are spread over the mattress, they will protect it, and will keep your bed or baby's crib in a perfect Sanitary condition.

Quilted Mattress Pads wash perfectly, and are as good as new after laundering.

They are sold in all sizes by Dry Goods dealers

EXCELSIOR QUILTING CO.
15 Lighthouse Street : : : New York

Made-to-Order Suits $12.50

Nothing Ready-Made

Guaranteed to fit and please you. You take no risk. You simply allow us to prove how much better our garments are than those you buy of your local tailor for twice our price.

10,000 Pairs of $5 Trousers Free

FREE

To induce you to give us your first order, we will give you a pair of $5.00 All Wool Trousers Free with your first suit order, providing you write today for Free Cloth Samples of our elegant $12.50, $15, $18 and $20 guaranteed all-wool suits, each made strictly to order.

We hereby agree to give you 6 days to examine and try on the garments in your own home, with the distinct agreement to refund the entire amount upon the return of the garments to us, if unsatisfactory. Write today for book of styles, measurement blanks and superb assortment of nob-by all-wool suiting samples free, and see for yourself how well we can dress you and the dollars you can save by ordering a suit of us and getting a pair of $5 all-wool trousers absolutely free

Owen T. Moses & Co., Tailors, 228 Moses Building, Chicago

Reference: Any one of our 500,000 Customers or the Milwaukee Ave. State Bank, Chicago. Capital Stock, $100,000.00.

.....Fill out and mail this coupon today.....

Owen T. Moses & Co., 228 Moses Bldg., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—Please send me style book and samples of suits, including your free trousers samples.

I wish a suit made to my order to cost about $.....

I prefer.....color and.....weight of goods.

Name.....

Address.....

There is none of the modern, cheap-and-hasty, machine-made "throw-together" in the construction of

GABLER PIANOS

To-day, as for more than a half century, they are built in the thorough-going, long-lasting fashion, by careful, time-taking HAND-WORK, guided by artistic ideals and the pride of expert craftsmanship.

Hence the "Gabler tone" — sonorous, silvery-sweet, and improving with use like that of a violin.

Hence the solid money value of a Gabler, less affected by use and time than any piano now on the market.

Write for Particulars of the

"GABLER EASY PURCHASE PLAN"

The Best Way to Get the Best Piano Built.

ERNEST GABLER & BROTHER,
404 East 107th St., New York City.

Prize Story Treat

We will mail 21 back numbers of The Black Cat containing 108 stories, including many that won from $100 to $1,000 each—for 56 cents.

As The Black Cat is devoted entirely to short stories, back numbers are as up to date as the current issue.

The Shortstory Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

GET RICH

A hundred thousand Fortunes will be made this year in Goldfield. Are you going to sit still and watch others carry off the Money, or get some of it yourself? We instruct you FREE how to obtain a liberal share. "Safe as a Bank." Write to-day. FRANK H. WRAY CO., 533 Broadway, N. Y.

SLIGHTLY USED FURNITURE

from the INSIDE INN and ten other leading World's Fair hotels

AT ONE-FOURTH COST

Iron Beds, 50c; Dressers, $2.50;

Extension Tables, $3.50; Chairs,

25c; Sheets, 10c; 9x12 Rugs, $5.00;

and everything in proportion. All good as new.

Our Big Warehouse is Overflowing with the greatest Bargain Clearing Sale ever held.

Complete Catalogue sent FREE Dept. C. L.

LANCAN & TAYLOR, St. Louis, Mo.

FINANCIAL OPPORTUNITY

Any reader of this publication can communicate with this advertiser, a prominent business man who knows of an investment which he believes will pay at least 10 per cent. the first year, 24 per cent. the second year, 50 per cent. the third year, and 100 per cent. or more thereafter, and which will bear the closest investigation. He has himself invested in this company. The shares are not offered for public subscription, but a limited number can be bought if early action is taken. His certificates are guaranteed by the President of the concern, who is rated at a half million. And it might be that this same arrangement could be made with other inventors. The advertiser wishes to withhold his identity and also that of the concern. But to anyone interested he would be glad to give full information as to the company. Then they can correspond direct with the President of the concern, who is widely known. Address E. R. G., Box 1270, New York City. And be sure that you mention that you are a reader of THE BLACK CAT.

PURE WHISKEY

At First Cost

At our distillery at Troy, Ohio, we make an average of 9,580 gallons of PURE WHISKEY a day. It is the best whiskey that can be produced in one of the most modern and best equipped distilling plants in the world by a company with a capital of $500,000.00 paid in full and an experience of 39 years in the distilling business.

This PURE HAYNER WHISKEY goes direct to you from our distillery. It doesn't pass through the hands of any dealer or middleman to adulterate. You thus save the dealers' enormous profits. You buy at the distiller's price. You get it at first cost. You cannot buy anything purer, better or more satisfactory no matter how much you pay.

HAYNER WHISKEY is prescribed by physicians and used in hospitals because of its goodness and purity. Our half a million satisfied customers give further testimony of its merits.

Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Embassy, Washington, D. C.
 "I have found HAYNER WHISKEY excellent as well for a tonic as for a table drink."
L. Von Hengelmuller, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador.

HAYNER WHISKEY

4 FULL $3.²⁰ EXPRESS
QUARTS 3 PREPAID

OUR OFFER We will send you in a plain sealed case, with no marks to show contents, FOUR FULL QUART BOTTLES OF HAYNER PRIVATE STOCK RYE FOR $3.20, and we will pay the express charges. Take it home and sample it, have your doctor test it—every bottle if you wish. Then if you don't find it just as we say and perfectly satisfactory ship it back to us AT OUR EXPENSE and your $3.20 will be promptly refunded. How could any offer be fairer? YOU don't risk a cent.

Orders for Ariz., Cal., Col., Idaho, Mont., Nev., N. Mex., Ore., Utah, Wash., or Wyo., must be on the basis of 4 Quarts for $4.00 by Express Prepaid or 20 Quarts for $15.20, by Freight Prepaid.

THE HAYNER DISTILLING COMPANY

Dayton, O. St. Louis, Mo. St. Paul, Minn. Atlanta, Ga.

DISTILLERY, TROY, O.

ESTABLISHED, 1866.

Real Parisian Life

Tales more Fascinating and Exciting than the Arabian Nights or French Court Memoirs.

I have secured these sets of Paul de Kock from the F. J. Quinby Co., which were awarded the Gold Medal at St. Louis. Rather than rebind them—they are slightly rubbed through handling—I will dispose of them at half price as long as they last, and upon small monthly payments, and send them on one week's approval, carriage free.

Paul de Kock

The Merriest French Humorist

has written sparkling, witty, amusing, riveting novels—antidotes for melancholy. The stories race merrily along, nothing didactic or dull; as original as Boccaccio, as mirthful as Gil Blas, as fascinating as the Oriental Tales and as captivating as the DIARIES OF THE FRENCH MAIDS. These stories are unexpurgated and translated with fidelity into English. While they have been criticized as spicy and sensational, the best authorities have adjudged them classics, ranking with Smollett, Sterne, The Arabian Nights and Balzac.

Short Fascinating Stories

"Paul de Kock is a tonic in books instead of bottles."—Max O'Rell. "His charming characters seem to be under the influence of champagne."—Charles Lever. "He has kept France laughing for years—the Smollett of France."—Boston Herald. We hate the superlative, but believe this the best and richest book value ever offered. The set contains the most delicate and artistic French illustrations obtainable, made specially for this work by Glacens, Sloan, Wenzell, Sterner and many other famous artists.

Illustrated Booklet Free

Giving you full particulars and sample pages of this rare set of books; but you must write to-day, stating whether you are interested in cloth or half morocco three-quarter or full binding.

C. T. BRAINARD, 425-427 Fifth Ave., New York.
Please send me booklet and particulars regarding Paul de Kock's works. I am interested in the (Signing this incurs no obligation)

..... binding.

Name

Address

B. C. May

BOSTON & MAINE R. R.

Summer Publications

DESCRIPTIVE OF

New England Scenery and Summer Resorts

Fully illustrated and containing valuable maps

Fishing and Hunting All Along Shore Lakes and Streams

Among the Mountains

The Valley of the Connecticut and Northern Vermont

Southeast New Hampshire

Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley

Southwest New Hampshire

Merrimack Valley Lake Sunapee

Central Massachusetts

Lake Memphremagog and About There

The Monadnock Region

Excursion and Summer Hotel Book—Free

Any one of the above Publications sent on receipt of Two Cents in Stamps

A COLORED BIRD'S-EYE VIEW

From Mt. Washington, or a Colored Bird's-Eye View of Lake Winnepesaukee

Either of the above will be sent on receipt of SIX CENTS in STAMPS

PORTFOLIOS

A Series of Beautiful Half-Tone Reproductions of Photographs taken expressly for these works, illustrating New England Scenery: have been published under the following titles:

New England Lakes

Rivers of New England

Mountains of New England

Seashore of New England

Picturesque New England

(Historic-Miscellaneous)

The Charles River to the Hudson

Size of Illustrations, 4 x 6 inches

Will be mailed upon receipt of SIX CENTS for each Book

Address

PASSENGER DEPARTMENT

BOSTON & MAINE R. R.

Boston, Mass.

D. J. FLANDERS, General Passenger and Ticket Agent.

RUBIFOAM

FOR THE TEETH

Like the sun bursting through the draperies of dawn, is a smile of pearls, radiant with RUBIFOAM

25¢ EVERYWHERE
SAMPLE FREE

E.W. HOYT & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

MORE THAN 400 SHAVES

WITHOUT STROPPING

This is a low average of the number of shaves that can be secured with a

Gillette Safety Razor

With each razor there are twelve double edged blades of wafer steel, tempered so hard, by our secret process, they must be ground with Diamond Dust, and so perfectly sharpened, every one will give from ten to forty delightful, velvety shaves without stropping. When they are dull we will send you a new blade for every two returned to us. Repeated exchanging in this way gives you an equivalent of twenty-two blades with every outfit. After they are all used, new ones can be purchased at so low a price that your shaving will cost you but a fraction of a cent a shave.

Gillette Sales Co., New York. Gentlemen—I bought one of your razors last September and I would not sell it for many times its value if I could not get another. In fact it is the only razor. I have used one blade sixty-two times and am still using it. We have a chain of 25 tanks and several of our boys have bought the razor from seeing mine.

Respectfully,
L. GREENWOOD,
Auditor Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., Sioux City, Iowa.

Ask your dealer for the Gillette Safety Razor; he can procure it for you. Write for our interesting booklet which explains our thirty days free trial offer. Most dealers make this offer; if yours don't, we will.

The Gillette Sales Company, 1124 Times Building, Times Sq., New York.

References: Any one of our 168,141 satisfied users to Jan. 1, 1905, our first year in the market.

ACTUAL SIZE

TRIPLE SILVER
PLATE

This illustrates Razor ready for Adjustment

TUG OF WAR

It's easy to win back a strong heart, stomach and nerves and easy to "best" the Coffee habit when you quit it entirely and use well-made

POSTUM

There's a reason.

Hydrozone

CURES

ECZEMA and kindred skin diseases. Indorsed by the medical profession and sold by leading druggists. HYDROZONE, although harmless, is the most powerful germicide. Not genuine without my signature:

Charles Harchant

87 Prince Street,
New York.

Chemist and Graduate of the "Ecole Centrale des Arts et Manufactures de Paris, France."

Preparations with similar names are concoctions of water, containing oil of vitriol, sulphurous acid and inert impurities.

A FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

of HYDROZONE, sufficient to demonstrate its healing properties, will be sent on receipt of attached coupon. (Name your druggist.) Requests without coupon ignored. Only one free bottle to a family.

Write legibly. Coupon good only until June 5, '05.

Name.....

Address.....

19

City.....State.....

Druggist.....

"QUALITY REMEMBERED
long after price is forgotten"

THE ONLY
COCOA & CHOCOLATE
OF WHICH THIS CAN TRULY BE SAID IS

Huyler's

SOLD BY GROCERS & DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

"Free from the care which wearies and annoys.
Where every hour brings its several joys."

"AMERICA'S SUMMER RESORTS."

This is one of the most complete publications of its kind, and will assist those who are wondering where they will go to spend their vacation this summer.

It contains a valuable map, in addition to much interesting information regarding resorts on or reached by the

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

A copy will be sent free upon receipt of a two-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, Grand Central Station, New York.